PERRY'S SENSATIONAL VICTORY OVER COCHET

Thrilling Five-Set Battle Gives Britain Winning Leading in Davis Cup

Merlin Congratulates His Conqueror.

A TRIUMPH FOR AGGRESSION

PERRY'S PERSISTENCE IN ATTACK

UPS AND DOWNS OF A GREAT MATCH

PLAYING TENNIS OF A CALIBRE WHICH LEFT A CROWD OF 13,000 ALMOST SPEECHLESS, F. J. PERRY, THE 23-YEARS-OLD ENGLISH TENNIS "ACE," CROWNED ALL HIS PREVIOUS FEATS IN INTERNATIONAL COMPETITION YESTERDAY BY DEFEATING HENRI COCHET BY THREE SETS TO TWO TO GIVE BRITAIN A LEAD OF TWO MATCHES TO LOVE IN THE CHALLENGE ROUND OF THE DAVIS CUP.

Britain would seem to have virtually won the trophy, for H. W. Austin, in the opening match of the afternoon, toyed with Andre Merlin to win in straight sets, and whatever else happens, Perry can be regarded as an almost certain winner against Merlin.

It took Perry five sets to beat Cochet, but had it not been for one bad patch in the first set, he would have won in three. As it was he spectacularly brought the game to a finish by sweeping the Frenchman off the court in the fifth set to win 8-10, 6-4, 8-6, 3-6, 6-1.

COCHET CRUMPLES UP IN FINAL SET

The Englishman, seemed inspired by the occasion and his compatriot's victory in the first match, and played superlative tennis—probably the finest of his career, certainly exceeding anything seen from him at the Stade Roland Garros.

Even his great victory over Borotra in the challenge round of 1931 paled before yesterday's classic exhibition.

WON FROM THE NET.

Perry won from the net, literally. He went up to the middle of the rectangle at the slightest opportunity and from there volleyed his way through to victory.

He had his bad periods, as is to be expected when a player is indulging in a sustained attacking game for five sets. But he always succeeded in recovering and gaining control over himself and the situation.

Cochet, defending for four sets like a cornered tiger, was non-plussed by the accuracy and penetrative effect of Perry's network, and finally broke down and withered before the onslaught.

AMAZING RECOVERIES.

Perry was not only the more spectacular player, but he added to his tempestuous tactics a skill which assured him of victory. His recoveries were nothing short of amazing. He was led 3-1 in the first set and levelled up, was in arrears 4-2 in the second and then became positively unplayable and in the third had set point against him at 6-3 and then turned the tables completely, proceeded to win five games to one, treating the great Cochet as if he were a "rabbit."

The first set was, so far as incidents and excitement were concerned, a complete tennis match. It had the crowd delirious.

Perry, just a little nervous to begin with, double-faulted in both the second and fourth games to allow Cochet to go out to a 3-1 lead. Ordinarily this would be sufficient to give the Frenchman the set at about 6-3.

PERRY'S VOLLEYING.

But Perry discovered that the volleying was working smoothly and he seized the opportunity with both hands. A drive to Cochet's wings and then up to the centre of the court, from where, by means of perfectly angled shots, he volleyed his way past the French idol.

Six-all was called and still Perry was calling the tune, but finding Cochet brilliant in defence and holding his own. Games then went with service until the eighteenth, when Cochet led 9-8.

LOSES CONCENTRATION.

Perry served and at this point he was playing truly remarkable tennis with Cochet obviously tiring. It would be sensed that if Perry won his service, he would also win the set. The Englishman scored the first two points and then with a suddenness quite startling, he lost concentration.

It was fatal. Cochet, picking up the returns with agility, pierced Perry's net campaign with a series of fine shots, the Englishman making blunder after blunder.

The result was that Cochet went out for the first set on Perry's service.

SECOND SET.

In the second stanza Perry again mixed his play with brilliance and strange lapses. Still hugging the net he met with early success going out to a two-love lead, but errors followed and Cochet, imperturbable and still playing with the utmost confidence from the baseline, carried off a string of four games.

There followed an inspired period by Perry. Clever anticipation was succeeded by winning volleys to all parts of the court.

The crowd saw their idol outplayed.

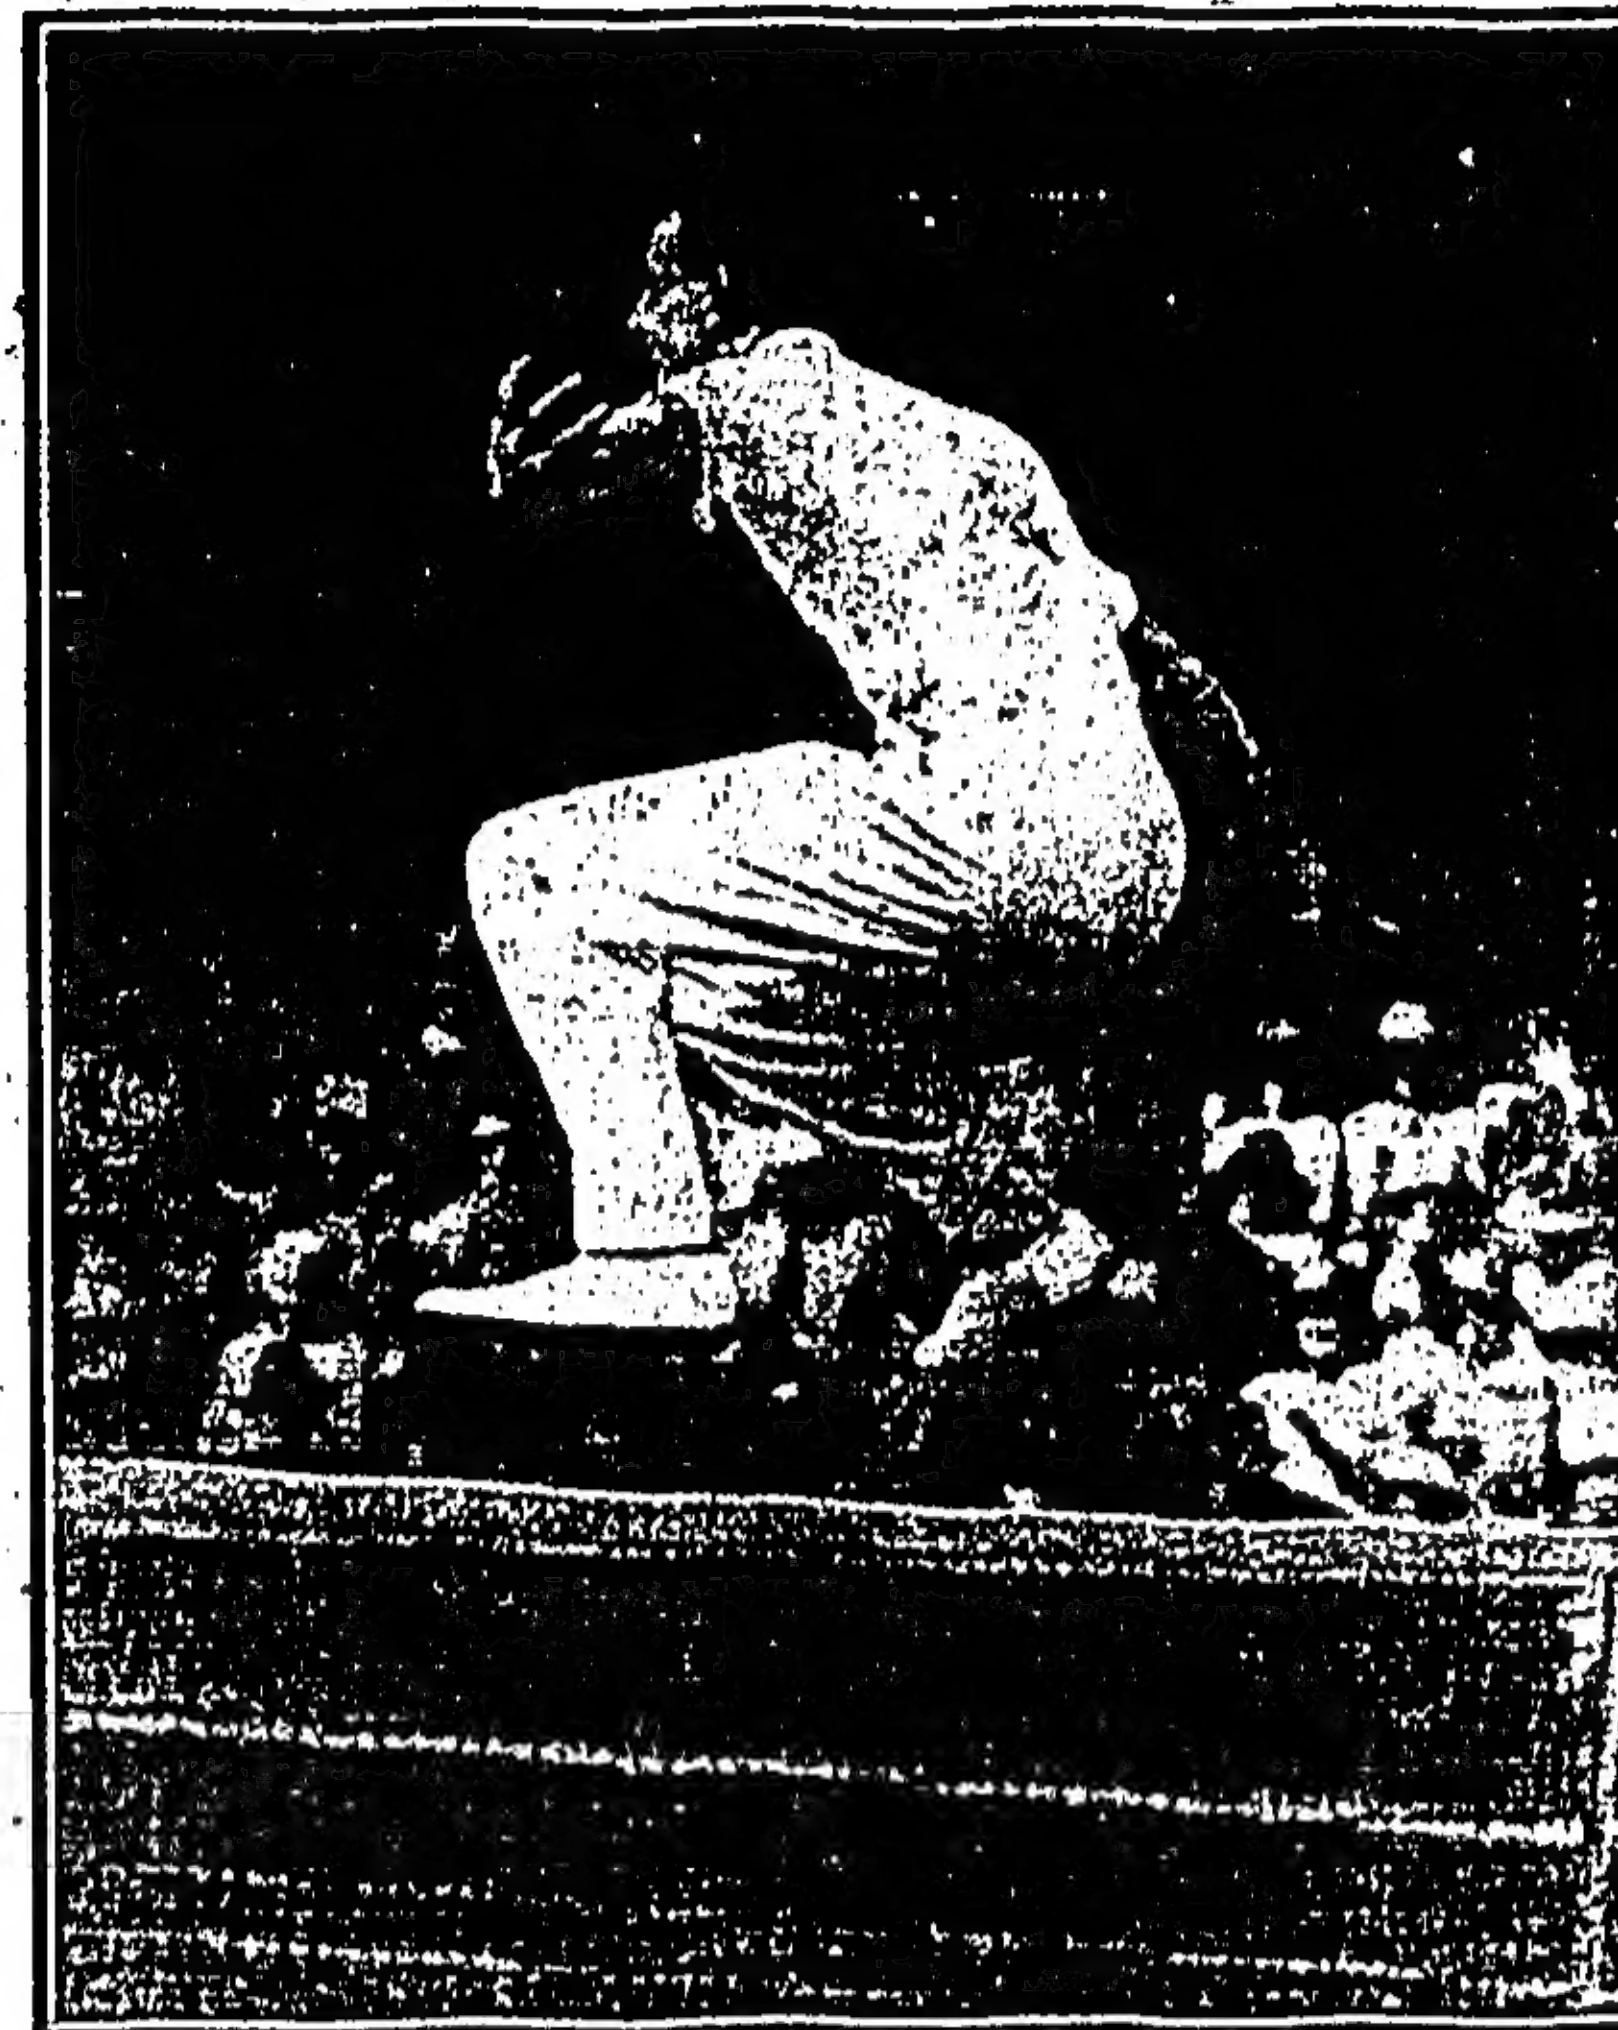

The Englishman stormed his way through to win four games in sequence and win the second set. It was dazzling tennis.

But Cochet was by no means benten, although everything pointed to Perry, so long as he remained consistent, eventually obtaining the upper hand. But such an ascendancy was long delayed.

SET SNATCHED FROM SET POINT.

The Frenchman succeeded in capturing a lead of 6-3 in the third set and actually had set point at this score. Once again Perry became re-galvanised and adopting the established form of attack set about his task in a manner which

If Perry jumped for joy, he was well justified.

WANSTEAD WIN THE ESPLAN CUP

Hongkong Bowlers Do Not Improve

(Our Own Correspondent).

(By Telegraph. Copyright. Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1931. Received, July 29, 10.55 a.m.)

London, July 28. The weaknesses revealed by the team of Hongkong lawn bowlers in their previous matches in London did not encourage high hopes of their success in the Esplan Cup Competition played at Wanstead to-day.

Wanstead won comfortably as expected, the final score being 105 shots to 57 in their favour.

ARMADA TO FLY ATLANTIC

NEWFOUNDLAND TO IRELAND DIRECT

BALBO CHANGES PLANS

London, July 29. General Balbo, the commander of the Italian air armada, has reverted to his intention of return to Italy, via Valentia, Ireland.

He is taking off from St. John, Newfoundland, at 8 a.m. British Summer Time to-day.

This means that the Italian flyingboat fleet will make a mass formation flight direct from Newfoundland to Southern Ireland, Valentia Harbour being on the south-west coast.

Beyond a doubt, this is the most spectacular adventure yet embarked upon by General Balbo, although the actual distance in direct line of flight is not more than seventeen hundred miles.

Weather conditions are reported to be favourable. —Reuter.

An amendment to the regulations under the Wild Birds Ordinance provides a close season for partridges and quail from February 1 to October 15, and for pigeons and doves from March 1 to September 14.

CABLE OVER CHANNEL

A NEW TELEPHONE SYSTEM

THE "ON DEMAND" SERVICE

London, July 28.

A new submarine telephone cable of the most advanced kind yet produced will be laid next month across the Straits of Dover and so increase the facilities for conversation between this country and the continent.

When the cable has been linked up with the new land lines already installed on both sides of the Channel, the "On Demand" service, already provided for inland trunk calls will, it is hoped, be available for international calls.

The new cable contains nineteen quads or double pairs of lines but a much greater number of extra conversations may be accommodated, if necessary, by the use of a carrier circuit system. —British Wireless.

DEVALUATION OF U.S. DOLLAR TO STOP

NEW ROOSEVELT POLICY

LIKELY COURSE OF EVENTS

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph. Copyright. Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1931. Received, July 29, 10.05 a.m.)

Washington, July 28.

It is learned from authoritative sources that the Administration has abandoned plans to increase commodity prices in the United States through the further devaluation of the dollar.

The suspension of devaluation may be only temporary. The policy may be resumed when the Administration can accurately gauge the effective recovery which has already taken place.

President Roosevelt is still determined to restore the country's purchasing power to the 1925 levels but he will endeavour to accomplish this through his recovery programme rather than by devaluation.

Many members of the administration are convinced that further striking improvement can be developed without drastic inflation which is found to be attended by the over-speculation evil and peril.

For these reasons, no further deliberate devaluation is to be expected in the near future, possibly never.

The Administration intends, of course, to continue to carry out the public works programme to its full limit, although this programme itself is mildly inflationary.

NO INTERVENTION.

However, the United States Government do not contemplate intervening in any way whatsoever in the foreign exchange market, although this does not mean that they may not, by other methods, steady the dollar.

It is pointed out by members of the Administration that the United States has other means available for steadying the dollar, namely, allowing shipments of gold, authorising the issue of further greenbacks and Federal Reserve Bank notes.

The Government has already had sanction of Congress for steps of this kind.

BUSINESS INFLUENCE.

President Roosevelt is not expected to use these means extensively but will depend upon general business improvement as a steadying influence.

In view of these explanations, the decision to halt the devaluation of the dollar is taken as an indication that ultimate stabilisation by international agreement or Government interference is far distant. —United Press. Per Gold Bar Co.

W.E.C. ECONOMIC PROPOSALS

RAPID EXECUTION STEPS

London, July 28.

The Journal of the World Conference announces to-day that the Executive Committee of the Bureau has adopted a resolution authorising the President of the Economic Commission to take, in consultation with the President, and through the intermediary of the Secretary-General of the Conference, all the necessary measures for the rapid execution of the proposals of the sub-committees of that commission. —British Wireless.

Hongkong To Expect A Blow

TYPHOON DEFINITELY THREATENING

NO. 3 SIGNAL HOISTED

The coast near Hongkong is definitely threatened with cyclonic gales during the coming twenty-four hours.

At six o'clock this morning when the latest definite information was available, the typhoon was situated about 250 miles to the South-East of the Colony, moving West-North-West.

This means that if the disturbance maintains its present course, it is likely to pass to the south of the Colony, but sufficiently close to make weather conditions unpleasant.

The No. 3 signal was hoisted early this morning and it had not been changed by eleven o'clock.

NEAR PRATAS.

The typhoon seems to be travelling at a fairly rapid pace, rather in excess of ten miles an hour and gale winds. Much depends upon the influence of the Pratas, upon the typhoon. The disturbance was approaching the Pratas when the last warning was received.

If it passes south of the island, the blow in Hongkong may be less severe.

STOP PRESS

No. 7 signal was put up shortly before noon.

The inference is that the typhoon has passed inside the Pratas and is now heading straight for the Colony.

GUNMEN RIDDLE VICTIM

POLICE JOIN IN PISTOL DUEL

(Our Own Correspondent).

(By Telegraph. Copyright. Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1931. Received, July 29, 10.12 a.m.)

Shanghai, July 29. A sensational gun-battle occurred last night outside the Nanking Theatre in Avenue Edward VII.

Three armed gunmen attacked and killed a Chinese popularly known as "The Lottery King."

Their victim was simply riddled with bullets.

They trapped him in an alleyway close to the Nanking Theatre and poured bullets into him from three pistols.

Two of the gangsters made a clean getaway, but the third man was cornered and fought a pistol duel with the police in the course of which four passers-by were wounded.

The gunman was eventually killed.

None of the police engaged suffered injury.

Hollywood.—Linen, having taken a place in the sun this year, walks right into the ballroom too.

Joan Crawford has a stunning red and white polka dotted linen evening dress, with long gloves to match. Hand-made scallops of strips of white linen finish its edges and fasten down the front, looking a little like old-fashioned rickrack braid, only more de luxe.

Lona Andre wore white linen shorts and a white linen short-sleeved blouse, with stripes of blue linen running up the sides of the shorts.

Wynn Gibson wore a swaggar sailor hat made of brown linen, pulled low over her right eye, with a bow of linen lying flat to the crown being its only ornament.

Sally Ellers wore a dull pink linen dress with epaulettes of organdie and a fez of braided black organdie perched on one side of her head.

June Vlasak wore a white linen backless and sleeveless dress.

GLORIFYING
YOURSELFRight Shoes Trim Down
Wide Feet

By Alicia Hart

Summer shoes do a lot for the girl with wide feet.

Sandals with a T-strap arrangement up the vamp go a long way towards trimming the appearance of a foot in half.

A combination of materials breaks up the area of a foot.

Dark shoes are much more flattering than white. Dull white fabric is much more flattering than shiny.

If your feet are wide, keep your eye open for all these little foot-helpers. And remember, if you get a half size longer shoe, you'll probably be able to wear them a size narrower. Don't try to pinch your feet, particularly in summer. It never pays. But more length is more comfort, by and large. And it slenderizes your foot, too.

Grey shoes and beige ones always make feet look larger than darker tones. But if you want them, get the kind that have cut-outs or appliqued designs that run vertically up the vamp.

Try pumps on one foot and look to see if that foot doesn't look larger than the one in oxfords or sandals before buying them. Usually pumps make a fat foot look wider than sandals do.

Evening things are all in favour of the girl with wide or big feet this summer. Coming practically to the floor, feet make less difference. But, the open-shank evening slipper, with the fat foot sticking out over the side, never gives so sleek and well-groomed an appearance as the more conservative type of evening shoe.

FASHION NOTES

(From A Paris Correspondent)

Linings are superfluous this season, and the unlined wrap is the height of chic, whether it be short, medium, or long.

Some of the Paris dressmakers put shoulder yokes of chiffon inside their unlined wraps.

The turban of knitted cotton crocheted lace is very smart when worn with a dress also in crocheted lace and a coat of the same.

There are three styles of evening dresses. One has a very low décolletage, hardly any trimming, and relies for its effect on perfect cut. The next has flounces and very often a little shoulder cape, or else tiny frilled epaulettes. The third has a very full skirt, the fullness hanging from the waist right down to the hem.

Almost all of the net, tulle, and chiffon dresses this season are made with enormously wide skirts and close-fitting bodices.

The new colour combination for both day and evening clothes is brown and pale blue. Flowered chiffon are made with enormous leaves and single buds, placed rather far apart.

There are some lovely evening gowns made of two different materials. A striking one has a skirt of egg-yellow tulle, and a corsage in brown tulle with yellow.

YOUR CHILDREN.

By Olive Roberts Barton

Summer is the time for cuts, scratches and bruises. In hot weather these minor accidents need watching and care because heat induces germ activity.

The mother of a family cannot hope to escape altogether the summer's toll of small or large mishaps. Therefore she will be wise if she lays in certain supplies, to be ready and save delay. Two rolls of bandage, wide and narrow, a yard or two of sterilized cheesecloth (cut up ready for use) from which to cut swabbing cloths, a bottle of iodine, some pure alcohol, and whatever other healing agent your doctor suggests. Also a bottle of witch hazel for bruises.

Wash Cuts in Boiled Water

If a cut is deep and bleeds profusely get the doctor at once. A mother cannot tell if a big blood vessel has been severed. If it is a shallow cut press hard. "Above" the wound, that is on the side "toward" the heart. Press close to the opening but not on it. Do not keep up pressure until the hand or foot becomes blue.

Use boiled water for washing out the wound. It takes time to boil and cool water so put it on the stove in a broad, shallow pan not too full. The pan can then be set in another pan of cold water to cool it for use.

Do not catch up any cloth at all, clean as it may look. Now is the time to cut off a piece of your sterilized cheesecloth, or perhaps you have a store of old linen (sterilized) for such emergencies.

Scratches Are Dangerous

Wash out the wound and put on the iodine, or reverse the process. The antiseptic is needed quickly and a delay (hunting up materials for washing) is not so good. Do not seal the wound with anything that keeps out air. Adhesive tape should not be applied directly on a new wound, neither should collodion.

Scratches should be treated with respect—washed, disinfected and bandaged.

It is scratches that we must watch closely. They look so innocent we are likely to disregard them. Blood poisoning can and does easily result from scratches.

If you are in doubt about glass, splinters, ashes, or a needle point remaining in the wound, do not STAY in doubt. Get the child to a doctor quickly and let him investigate.

Firecracker Burns Serious

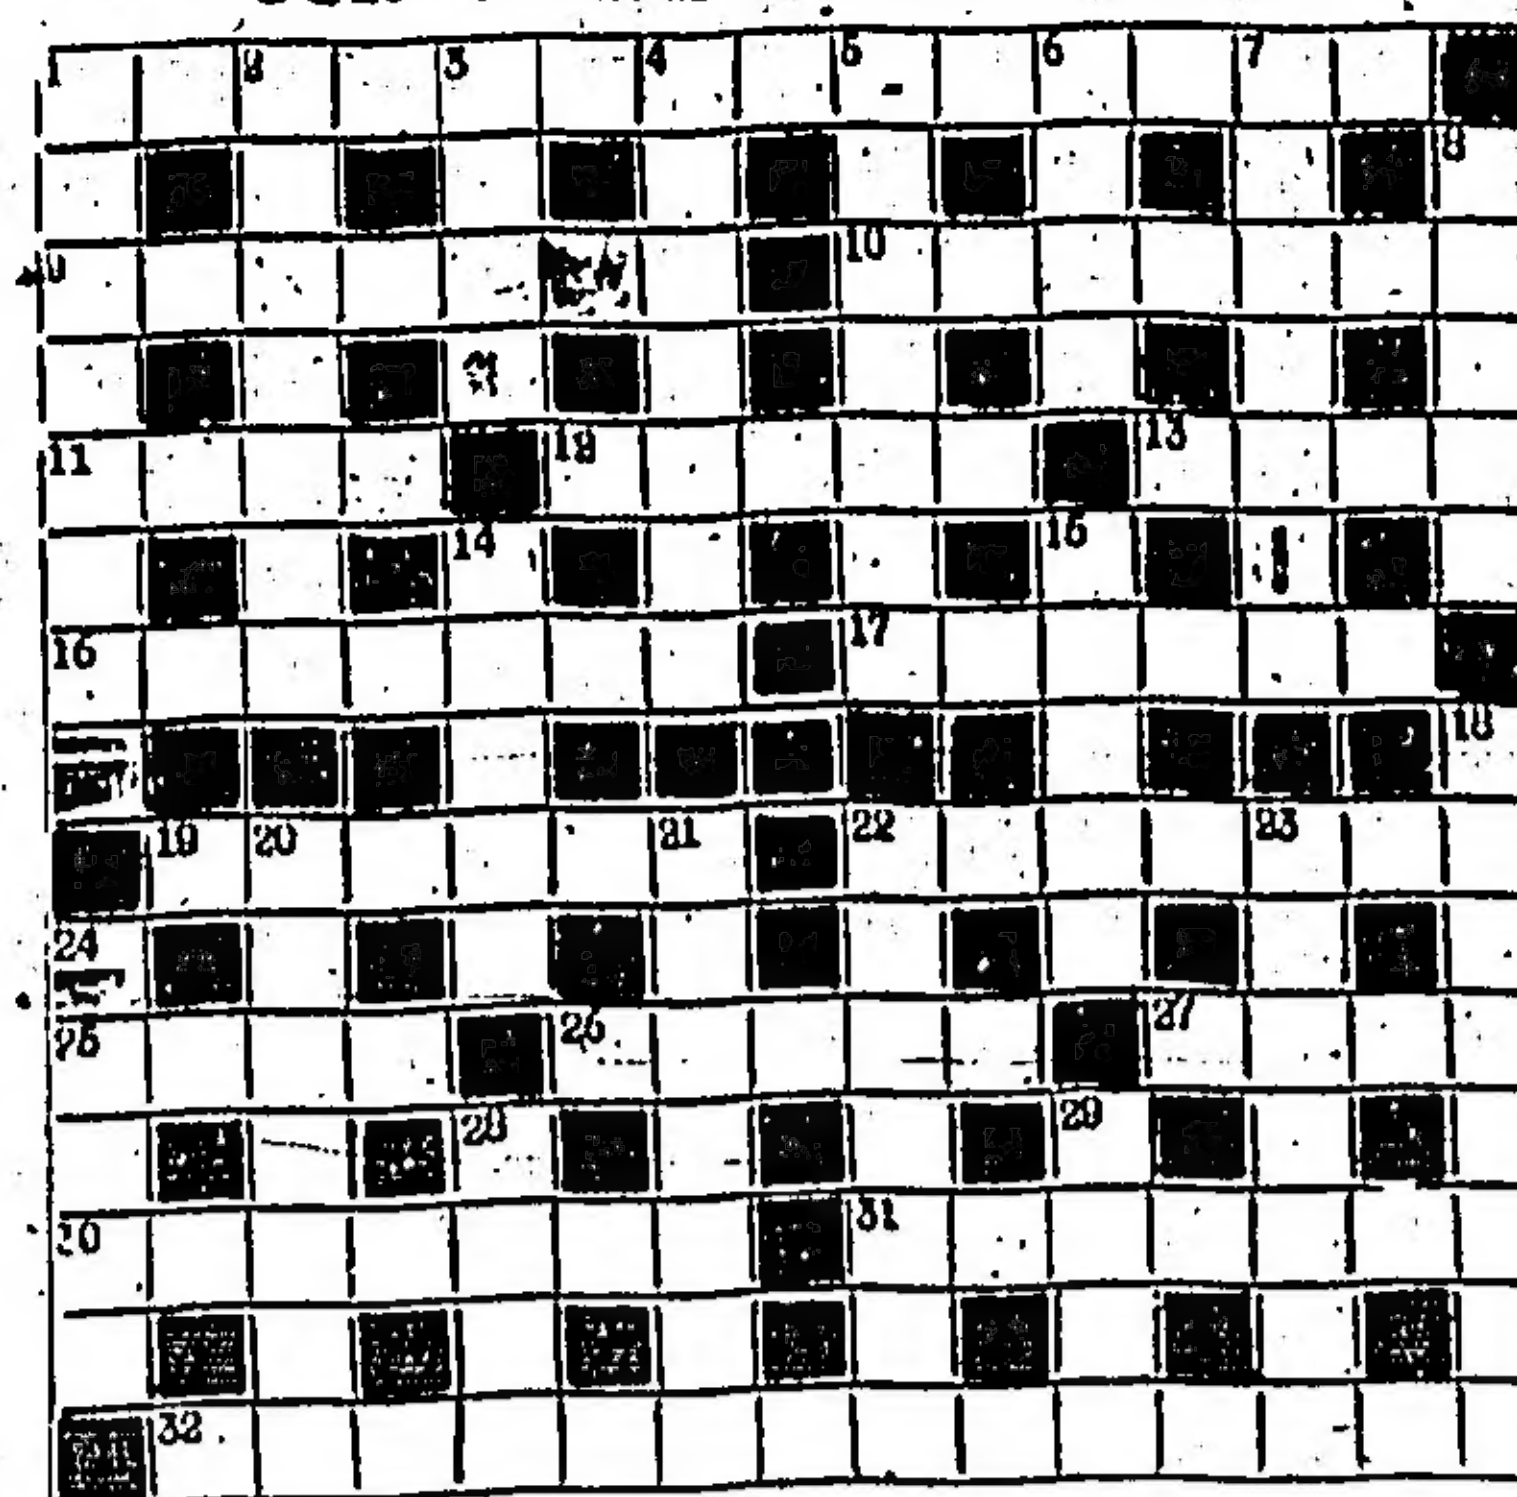

Don't allow children to take off scabs. This opens wounds to germs again.

Burns from firecrackers, even slight ones, are hospital cases, or at least doctor cases.

Burns if slight may be treated with a solution of baking soda or a simple ointment. Cover with a soft, clean cloth, preferably old linen.

In case of a severe burn lose no time in calling the doctor. Bad burns or scalds, call for treatment at once.

CHAPTER XLV

Going down into the neat little parlour Monnie was abruptly conscious of the room's shabbiness. The rug had long since faded, its bright, original pattern lost. They had bought the couch in the corner the year Daddy died and somehow, since, there had never been enough money to recover it. There was a worn place on one of the cushions. The curtains were spotted like everything else in Mrs. O'Dare's home, but they had quite obviously been patched and darned. There were scuffed marks—the sort small, sturdy shoes make—on all the chairs and on the upright piano.

How shabby, Monnie thought with a pang, all this would look to the urban eyes of her distinguished visitor. Ah, but she could change all this in the twinkling of an eye if only she wanted to! No longer need her mother ruin her eyes over fine mending, prolonging the life of damask and wool. No longer need the table be set with cracked, chipped china. The O'Dares could have silver and fine linen. Her mother could have luxury beyond her brightest dreams. Monnie considered that she had known the wildness and despair of first love and it had brought her nothing. Arthur Mackenzie would bring her the calm, assured devotion of middle age. Along with this he could offer her security and assurance. These thoughts raced through Monnie's mind as, before the mirror in the hall, she touched her hair nervously, smoothed her frock.

"What are you thinking of?" Kay asked.

Monnie made a sweeping gesture. "Wondering what he'll think of—all this."

"Won't like it?"

"Won't—?" Monnie wrinkled her nose. "I don't much care whether he does or not. I was thinking how dull this place must be for Mother. She knows every worn place in the rug, every scratch on the furniture. I was wishing I could make a clean sweep of it all, get her new things."

"D'ye know," Kay interrupted with an air of sagacity, "I don't believe she minds so much—not as we do. Every bit of it—the shabbiness I mean—is home to Mother. We're always going about, seeing other people's things and being envious. But she never complains."

"Just the same I'd like to be able to get her new things," said Monnie sturdily. "And someone to help her—to wash dishes and do the heavy part of the cleaning. She must have washed millions of dishes in the last 10 years."

"Not for me!" yawned Kay lazily. "I never meant to wash any. When I'm an old maid I shall live in one room—a studio—and have a maid in a gray uniform to wait on me."

"That would be nice," Monnie agreed dreamily, straightening a picture. "Where is Mama, by the way?"

"She ran across to Mrs. Cox's, with some broth. Della is sick with flu or something."

"I wish she'd rest once in a while," Monnie complained. "She never stops. It worries me."

"She doesn't want to," Kay told her older sister. "She loves doing the things she does."

"I guess you're right. But I want her life to be easier, just the same," Monnie persisted.

Kay sprang to attention at the sound of the bell. "Guess that's your man."

"Don't run away, please!" Monnie besought. "I'll feel such a fool. Answer the door like a good girl."

Kay complied, looking, in her blue frock, like a modern angel with a halo of fair curls. Kay had charming manners, Monnie reflected, listening to her sister's duty voice in greeting. Yes, Kay had a great deal of promise. Unless Monnie did something about it, though, her sister would be buried forever in this small place. There were all sorts of reasons for Monnie to accept Arthur Mackenzie. And no obstacles. Wouldn't it seem idiosyncrasy now for her to refuse him? If he still wanted her, of course. And she rather thought he did. His letters of late had held a warm, urgent note.

In an instant he was before her, dominating the small room, bigger than she remembered him, impressive in his big coat with the scent of damp tweed and good Russian leather clinging to him.

"Well! Well!"

Monnie was laughing, finding she had nothing to say, a trifle shy with the great man. Was it possible she had been so casual with him in London? All that seemed ages ago and she herself at that time another girl.

"But you look splendid!"

"Thank you," he made her feel small and childish.

He would not let Kay take his coat—nonsense. It could go right there on the hall tree. It was a wretched night. He had a car waiting. He was driving on to Cincinnati. He would take a plane the day following on his way west.

Monnie said shyly that she was sorry she couldn't invite him to stop with them. Without seeming to, his shrewd glance took in the little house. That was kind, he said, but he'd planned to go on. This must be the western hospitality he'd heard so much about.

Kay drifted away with a murmured excuse after a moment or two and Monnie heard the click of her mother's key in the lock. Mrs. O'Dare would slip upstairs to freshen her costume and brush her soft graying hair before presenting herself to the visitor.

They made small talk. Mackenzie seemed interested in everything. What was Monnie doing? Ah, that sounded good! Did she like her new work? And her brother—the older one? What about him? This little sister was a beauty, wasn't she?

Everyone thought so, Monnie agreed, kindling at his praise. Kay had thought of going on the stage, she added, but just now she seemed perfectly happy, working on the local newspaper. Insisted on contributing her share to the family income, too.

"She'd make a sensation in New York," Mackenzie said enthusiastically. "With the right gowns. And she should have her hair done by Antoine. She has a rare quality."

Monnie turned at the faint rustle in the doorway. "My mother," she introduced proudly. Mackenzie, springing to his feet, bowed low. One might, thought Monnie, her heart swelling, be ashamed of the scuffed chairs and threadbare carpet but anyone in the world would be proud of a mother like that. Character was moulded on the very bones of the fine face. The eyes were beautiful, although they had lost the sparkle of youth. "Mother wouldn't be one bit different, in satins," the girl reflected loyally, listening to the pleasant voice.

"But I want her to have them just the same."

Soon they were alone together and the man turned toward her. "I like them all," he told her

PROLETARIAN PEACE.

MINE. SUN YAT-SEN CALLS ANTI-WAR PARLEY

Shanghai, July 28. Madame Sun Yat-sen, in her capacity as Chairman of the Committee, is making preparations for the World's Anti-War Conference. She issued a statement this morning formally announcing the convocation of the Conference in September.

In her statement Madame Sun Yat-sen declared that at present, the Powers were all preparing for a second World War, while the proletariat's sufferings were increasing everyday. Therefore it is necessary for the world's working class to unite and present a united front against the imperialists.

Continuing, Madame Sun declared that the forthcoming Conference is the result of a decision of the Anti-War Conference in Amsterdam last August.

The Conference would be attended by 2,000 delegates. Representing thirty million workers in thirty countries.

Concluding, Madame Sun urged factory operatives, unemployed workers, labour unions, students, writers, artists and volunteer Anti-Japanese organisations to join the Conference.—Reuter.

swiftly. "They're great, your people. Just what one might expect."

"Thank you." She flushed at his honest admiration.

"Monnie, I haven't long to stop. I must settle this business quickly. Do you know what I've come for?"

That was a hard question to answer, in all simplicity, but her eyes were eloquent.

"Have you thought it over, dear? I hate to rush you but it seems to me I've been waiting a long time. What have you to say to me?"

She lifted her head. The words were trembled on the tip of her tongue but just then there was an interruption in the form of a long pen at the bell. Sounds from the kitchen regions indicated Kay and the mother were busy with domestic duties and had not heard the sound.

"I'll go," Monnie said swiftly, somehow glad of the respite.

She hastened to the door, making a pretty picture in her swirling frock, her cheeks rosy, her eyes alight with excitement. To her amazement, Charles Eustace stood on the threshold.

"May I come in for a moment, Monica?" He was looking very handsome. "I want to talk to you."

What could she say? What could she do? He had never been refused admittance at this hospitable door before. Monnie opened it wide and he followed her into the room where Mackenzie, lounging against the mantelpiece, examined some old photographs.

"I'm sorry. I didn't know you had a guest." Charles' tone was steady, polite. But Monica, having brought him thus far, had to go on. In a cool voice she introduced the men. "Mr. Mackenzie, Mr. Eustace."

Mackenzie turned, recognition dawning in his face, his annoyance for the moment in abeyance. "How do you do. But we've met before!"

Charles acknowledged the sentence with an ironic bow.

"Whatever shall I do with them both?" the girl asked herself despairingly. "Everything is spoiled now. Charles hates me for having Arthur here—not that it matters! To-morrow he'll know the truth!"

BANDITS ACTIVE

PROMINENT MERCHANT VICTIMISED

Yingkow, July 28. Within two hundred yards of the Newchwang Club, seven bandits entered the home of a prominent native Mahomedan merchant, named Chang Sung Pal at 2 a.m. to-day and demanded funds.

The bandits accepted fifteen pairs of gold bracelets and three thousand dollars in cash in consideration of the non-removal of their victim, but insisted on taking his two sons as hostages against further payments.

A police sentry fired on the band when they were leaving. The sentry was reproved by the bandits for running risks of reprisal, whereupon he retired to a nearby police-box with a connecting telephone to all stations and raised the alarm.

Notwithstanding the measures taken, the raiding party succeeded in accomplishing an exit from the town about dawn.—Reuter.

Boys Rescued.

The two Mahomedan boy captives were returned safely at 10 o'clock this morning.

The kidnappers, after a successful exit, were intercepted at the village of Hanchia, five miles east of Newchwang, at 8 o'clock by village volunteers, armed with muskets and other obsolete arms, who attacked the bandit party, killing two and scattering the remaining five.

The rescued boys were returned to their home under a strong escort of armed villagers.—Reuter.

RUSSIA AND JAPAN

ARE THE SOVIETS MERELY PLAYING FOR TIME?

(From A Special Correspondent).

Hsinking, July 13.

The situation as regards the C.E.R. is becoming more complicated every day as the chances of an agreement being reached at the Tokyo Conference seem to be very remote.

Though neither Soviet Russia nor Japan have any desire to enter into warlike operations, there are military parties in both countries who wish to see the matter worked out to a finish, each side being sure that it will win.

The operations in Jehol had their influence on the railway conflict in Northern Manchuria, Japan being so engaged with the clearance of all anti-Manchukuo elements out of Jehol, that she could not risk any military operations on a large scale on the north, while Soviet Russians sat still in their railway posts waiting to see which way the wind would blow.

The conference has certainly started with a divergence of opinion regarding the price which is so enormous that there does not seem to be any possibility of coming to a settlement. Meanwhile time is moving on and within another month Soviet Russia will be in a much better and stronger position to fight than she is at the present moment.

Gaining Time.

There are many who ask the question: Has the Conference simply been arranged to gain time and has Soviet Russia any real intention of selling her rights on the C.E.R.? Considering the amount of money that the Russian Government spent in the construction of the railway, and the property which is included in the inventory, the price offered by the Manchukuo authorities seems to be far too low and one which is calculated to end in a quarrel, the results of which no man in the world can tell.

On the other hand the Soviet, according to latest information, have a very large army in the east and have a fleet of aeroplanes all ready to fly into Manchukuo and even to Japan doing such damage as would be very serious for the Japanese side.

Letters from the Maritime Provinces state that all doubtful persons have been removed from this region and that the population now consists of only those people who are loyal to the Soviet Government. At the same time letters from the same district distinctly state that the crops on the Amur, and Ussuri basin will this year be superior to any that have been seen for many years and that therefore there will be plenty of food for the army.

The only place where the Japanese would probably gain a victory at the very start would be Vladivostok, which possesses no Soviet navy sufficiently strong to meet with a Japanese naval squadron, but Vladivostok has some very fine fortresses which it is reported have been entirely re-modelled during the past winter by German engineers who have introduced the most modern war equipment.

Air Strength.

The number of aeroplanes that the Soviet possesses in the Far East cannot be estimated, but there is no doubt that they are far in excess of the number that Japan can supply, and Soviet Russia possesses pilots of great daring who are considered to be experts in aviation warfare.

The news now coming in by telegraph from Japan itself is far from encouraging as there seem to be quite a number of organizations ready to overthrow the government if they can get a chance and it therefore would be a great risk for the Japanese government to send a large part of its army to the continent.

Finally it must not be forgotten that in the event of Soviet Russia and Japan coming to blows both China and Korea would throw in their lot with the former and the position of the Manchukuo government in such a case would become extremely precarious.

In certain Soviet circles there is a very buoyant feeling that, in the event of any conflict arising, the Soviet would have many advantages which the Japanese will find extremely difficult to get over.

A definite result from the Tokyo Conference should be obtainable within a fortnight unless it is true that the Soviet side are simply postponing the final clash for the purpose of getting their own house in such order that they will be able to strike a blow in Manchukuo which will probably surprise the world.

but with an America which is bonding all her efforts towards the stabilisation of her internal price-level, and leaving the dollar to fluctuate. This new policy is now declared to be a permanent one. The rest of the world is faced with the problem of determining how economic relationships with a country following such a course can be conducted.

These are not problems which statesmen can solve for themselves. There is a need for fresh study of the new situation and of expert advice.

These discussions should now proceed. America's new policy is still in the embryo stage; we do not, for instance, know how far Mr. Roosevelt wants prices to rise, or how he proposes to maintain them when they have reached the desired level.

But when the President's aims and methods have been defined, and when the experts' discussions have revealed a basis of common agreement, the Conference can meet again.

GENIUS FOR MAKING MONEY

ONCE PENNILESS NOW WEALTHY

LIFE OF MADAM COLETTA

London.

A penniless young Italian girl came to London 40 years ago.

Now she is one of the wealthiest women in the Metropolis.

This is the life story of Madam Coletta, who has sold the freehold of the Queen's Hotel, Leicester-square. The transaction involved a sum of over £250,000.

Madam Coletta says that she always had a genius for making money. Everything she touched turned to money.

Born in Rome, she came to London when she was only 15. Her first job was with a tailoring firm where she made buttonholes for five or six shillings a day according to the amount of work she did. Next she secured a job in a hair-dresser's shop, and at the age of 23 she was married, her husband opening a barber's shop and specialising in "penny shaves."

MADE SAUSAGES.

One day while lighting the fire she noticed that the label on the matchbox advertised olive oil which was being sold cheaply. She bought the oil, poured it into bottles and sold it to Italians in the Italian quarter in Clerkenwell, making a handsome profit on each bottle. Selling olive oil by day and making little aprons for Italian icecream vendors until late at night occupied her for some time until she bought a sausage machine and made Italian sausages for sale.

Eventually she turned her attention to buying and selling meat and poultry, going down to the market early in the morning. Later in the day she would sell the meat and poultry at a profit to London hotels and restaurants.

"I had not had any hotel experience," she said "before taking over the Queen's. The Queen's has been built 45 years and I was the first person to make it pay. I lost £6,000 in the first year but I soon altered that. In the ten years I have been here I have done all my own buying of meat and provisions. I have my own laundry in the hotel and my own machinery for making mineral waters."

But Madam Coletta will not give up. She has her eye on yet another venture.—Reuter.

5,000 MILES RIDE

PEDAL CYCLIST'S FEAT

ATE FRUIT ALL THE WAY

Sydney, N.S.W.

Having pedalled 5,000 miles on a bicycle, with a 40 lb pack, from Sydney to Cairns and back and over a wide area, eating nothing but fruit all the way, Jack Burrows has just returned to his home at Manly, N.S.W.

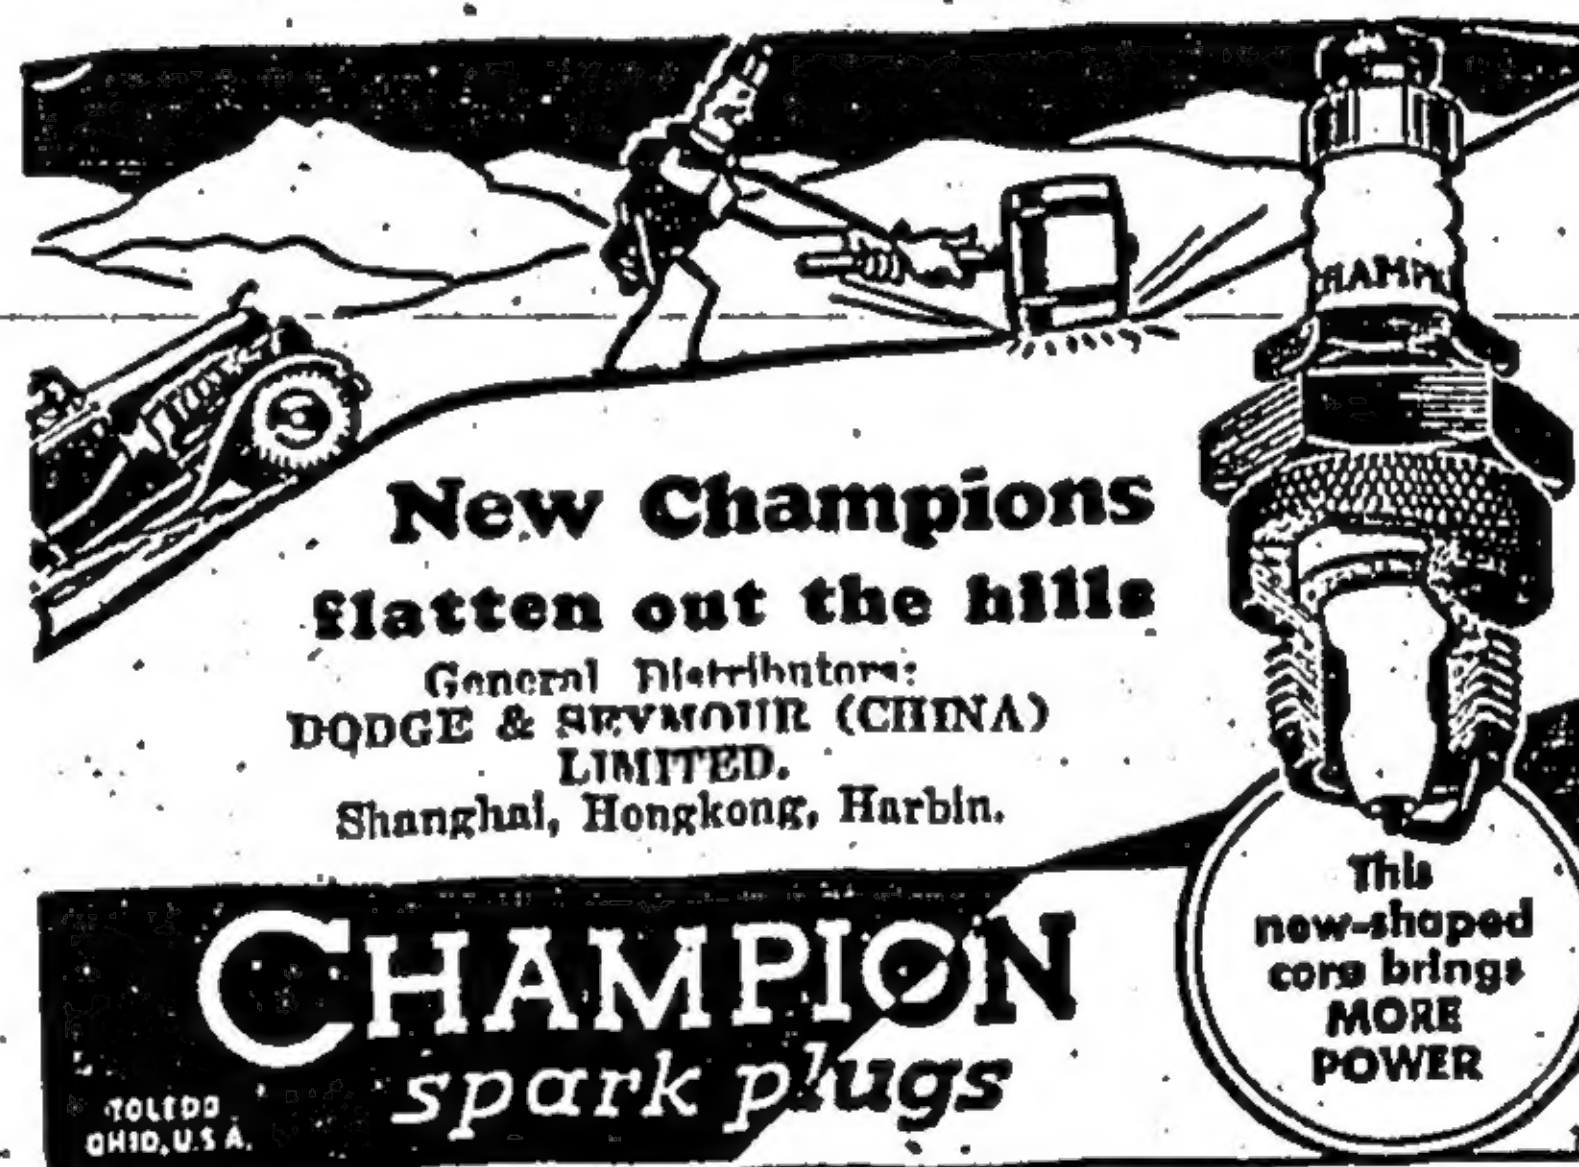

For the past two years Burrows has been a "fruitarian." Invalided out of the navy some years ago, suffering from the effects of gas, he went on a vegetarian diet, to be completely cured of his ailment. He gave up all meat and all cooked foods.

Later, Burrows experimented with a diet, solely of fruit, finding it more sustaining. He does not mix his fruits, eating only one kind at each meal. Like the birds, Burrows eats only when he feels hungry. For years he has been absolutely free from sickness, and has not even caught a cold, though sleeping out in all weathers during his tour.

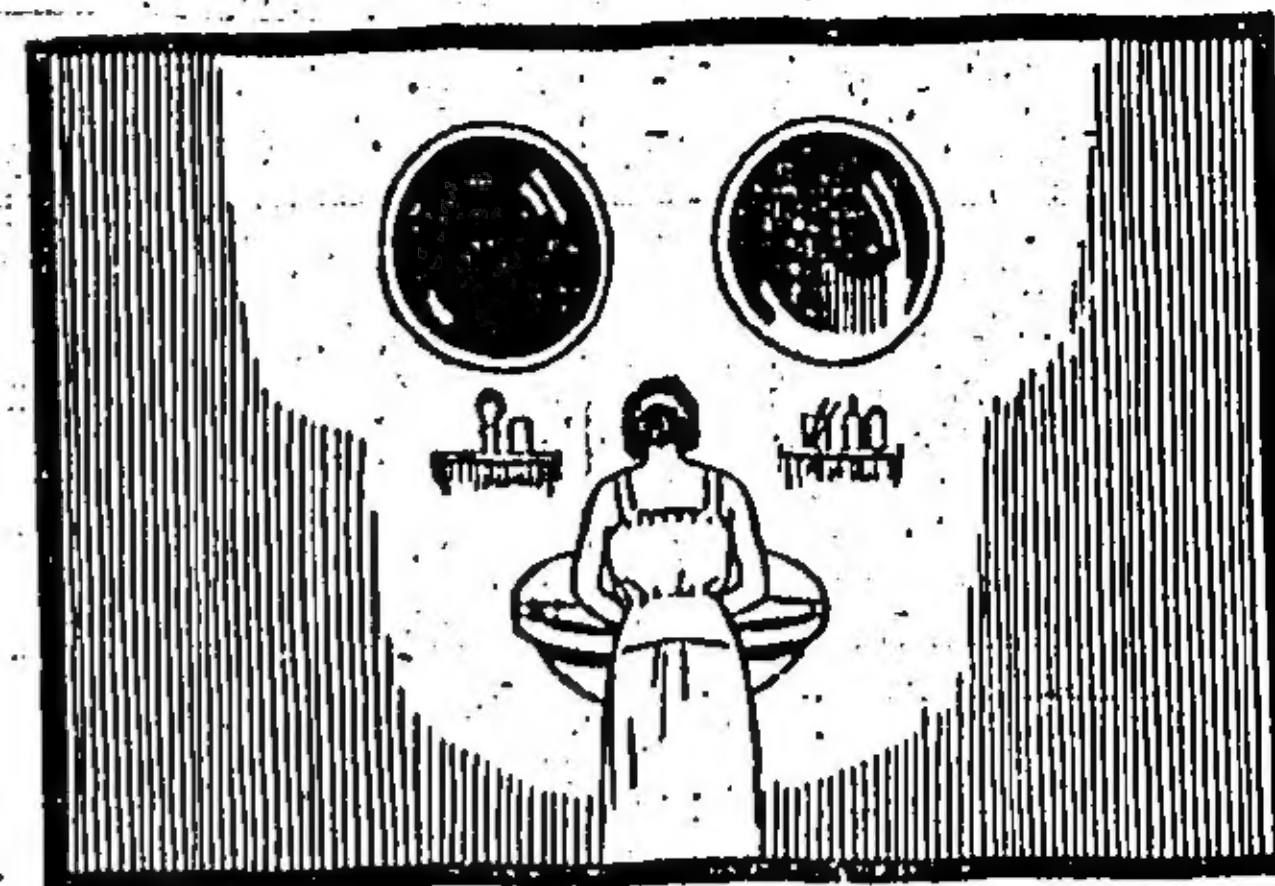

Burrows's favourite meal is half a dozen bananas. For days he lived on mangoes in Northern Queensland. An extract from his diary reveals one day's dietary at Kennedy:—

10 a.m. eight mangoes.
3 p.m. 12 mangoes.
7 p.m. 1 pineapple.

Coconuts are allowed in his list of fruits, and he lived for three weeks at Townsville on three a day. He is a non-smoker and teetotaler. Water, he seldom drinks, fruit supplying sufficient liquid nourishment for him.—Reuter.

"MERE WOMAN" LOOKS AT H.B. BEER

A VISIT TO SHUM TSENG

THE PLANT OF THE HONGKONG BREWERS & DISTILLERS, LTD.

(CONTRIBUTED)

Advertisements in most of the local papers having drawn our attention to H. B. beer, John and I took car the other day and drove out to see the Brewery. The drive was lively, and just beyond twelve miles we saw the Brewery, a well designed building of ferro-concrete mercifully as unlike one's idea of a factory as possible.

Making our way to the office door, we asked if we might see over the Brewery, and although we were told that it was not yet open to inspection even by such confirmed beer drinkers as my husband, something, possibly my new hat, or the fact that John won't be in the Colony when the official opening takes place on August 16, melted the heart of the Brewmaster. He not only let us in but took us over the Brewery himself and explained as much as mere laymen can be expected to understand of the rite of brewing. I believe I understood at least the theory of the thing, but what John took in I don't know except that, to his disappointment, it was not beer!

Masculine Cookery

I had no idea that beer has to go through so many different processes before it appears in its familiar delicious form. We saw it first as "mash," a sort of gruel of malt flour and tepid water, it certainly did not look very appetising then! It was being mixed in what they call the mash tun, just like one mixes flour and water in cooking. A little water added at a time and well stirred in. It made me wonder if we really are careful enough over this sort of mixing when I saw the extraordinary pains that brewers take! The mash then goes, little by little, into the copper, where it is heated by steam to release the sugar in the malt, and then, after straining, the hop leaves are added and it is all boiled together in the copper for two hours.

Cooling Processes

That all takes place on the first floor of the Brewery. To see the next part we had to go down to the ground floor where the mash is strained and the clear liquid, now for some mysterious reason called "wort," is pumped up to the fourth floor to be cooled. We, being comparatively unimportant human beings had to climb thousands of stairs, but I believe that later on they are going to install a lift. The wort cooler is a most fascinating sort of boiler. (It looks like that although I know its purpose is the exact opposite—to cool not boil!) However, that does not matter! Inside it are coils and coils of copper piping through which chilled water circulates and so reduces the temperature of the wort. At the same time sterilised air is blown up into the liquid through holes in the bottom of the cooler, and the wort absorbs the oxygen from this air. Why it is that the liquid does not drip through and stop up the holes I don't know, the brewmaster looked pityingly at the poor ignorant female when I asked and John looked superior, so that's that.

The Wash House.

John lost interest when there was no more beer in the making to be seen, but I was very glad to see the wash house through which the Chinese employees come in to work. Every one of them has to have a bath and change into clean clothes provided by the Brewery, before going into the plant. The Brewery seems to be a model factory in every way and I am sure that the beer will be lovely, and I am very much looking forward to tasting it on August 16th when the official opening takes place.

Like A Milk Cooler

The cooling process takes an hour so we did not stay to see it through, but went down to the third floor and saw the next process in imagination. This was not at all hard as it was a further cooling by means of the wort refrigerator which is exactly like a milk cooler and works in the same way. I tried to be intelligent here and remarked to the brewmaster "Oh yes—just like they cool milk."

He regarded me coldly, "Do they?" he said, "I've never seen milk cooled." I had a longing to say something about milk stout, but remembering that John had told me that they were only producing lager beer, refrained just in time.

In The Cellars

Then we caught up the beer again. Not the same lot of course but an earlier brew. This was down in the fermenting cellar on the ground floor. The light was dim and it was frightfully cold, 4 degrees centigrade the brewmaster said. The wort (it is going to be called beer in about half a minute) having come down in a copper pipe from the refrigerator, is run into huge tubs and the yeast added. It has to stay here for ten days. There was a ladder running up the side of one of the tubs, vats is the proper name I believe, and I looked sweetly and meaningly at the brewmaster, "Yes you can climb up if you like" he said. I didn't wait for a second invitation, and having parked my bag in his very astonished hands, because he happened to be closer than John, I nimbly ran up the ladder. There was the beer, H. B. Beer at last, with the yeast floating on top of it like a soapy scum. I was frightfully thrilled and dipped my finger in. It didn't taste nice, but of course it was only fermenting wort not beer at all, but it was really exciting to put one's finger in men's cooking for a change! "Well" said the brewmaster "you are the first lady in Hongkong who has seen the fermenting—wort!" and from his tone I felt pretty sure I shall be the only one!

After this we went into the maturing room, at a temperature of only 1 degree, where the beer stays in great closed vats for two months. It was really rather a relief to leave there for the bottling room where the atmosphere, though still cool, was more nearly normal. As no beer was ready for bottling at that time, we were only shown the machinery and the trolleys on which the full corked bottles are run into the pasteurising chamber and heated before being labelled and sent out.

John lost interest when there was no more beer in the making to be seen, but I was very glad to see the wash house through which the Chinese employees come in to work. Every one of them has to have a bath and change into clean clothes provided by the Brewery, before going into the plant. The Brewery seems to be a model factory in every way and I am sure that the beer will be lovely, and I am very much looking forward to tasting it on August 16th when the official opening takes place.

Millions of Gallons maturing— Older and better than ever

Never was your White Horse as good or as old as it is to-day. Years ago, exceptionally heavy stocks of the finest whiskies were laid down to anticipate sales which the quality would justify. These stocks are now fully matured. The result is that WHITE HORSE is now older and better than ever before, excellent as it was in 1932 and preceding years. This advance in quality and age will be maintained. White Horse is now the equivalent of a fine liqueur.

A REFORM NEEDED

An issue of high public importance was lightly touched upon this week by the case which came before Mr. Wynne-Jones following the sudden death of a Chinese youth. Dismissed at first as a "natural causes" case, it was later discovered that death was due to an injury received during a scuffle. The surrounding circumstances do not warrant reiteration and we have no criticism to level at anyone concerned in the affair. Nevertheless, it represents one of a long series of incidents which have been forcing upon us the conviction that the whole system practised in this Colony for dealing with sudden deaths, deaths by accident or by violence, or under suspicious circumstances, is in need of drastic overhauling. Forty-five years ago, an Ordinance was passed abolishing the office of Coroner and thrusting the duties of that office upon magistrates. Magistrates dealing with a comparatively small population were probably in a position to cope adequately with the additional duties required of them. To-day, already overworked in the Courts, they are not, however willing they may be. Five afternoons at an inquest by one magistrate, merely means that he is thrusting extra court work upon a colleague. Is it, therefore, to be wondered at, in these circumstances, that the magistrate's right of deciding whether or not an inquest is necessary is so frequently answered in the negative? Obvious murders are committed and no inquest is held! How many less obvious crimes get through as a result of the system? In fact, Hongkong's present method of meeting the problem of violent and sudden deaths is hopelessly out-of-date and dangerous to the community. We can anticipate the counter-argument that what the police are unable to ferret out is unlikely to be brought to light by the mere holding of an inquest, but it is just as well not to be too sure about that. Many are the persons elsewhere who have easily survived the ordeal of a police investigation and who have allowed an unguarded word to slip in the informal atmosphere of a Coroner's Court. In Hongkong to-day, there is more than sufficient work for a full-time Coroner and the need for his appointment is very real. It is easy to get away with murder in Hongkong to-day. And our present death inquiry system renders it just a trifle easier.

NOTES OF THE DAY

It is no good deluding ourselves about the first stage of the World Economic Conference. It has terminated in abject failure and has gone into indefinite adjournment without a pang of regret. Not a single basic question was settled and never will be settled until the contradictions of differing national economic systems are reduced. It is submitted as an excuse for failure to find any sort of common understanding that this was inevitable in the face of grave world economic conditions. It may be so but it is an argument we cannot follow. We imagined the gravity of the world's troubles as the spur and the goad, the compelling force, persuading the delegates to sink their prejudices in the common cause.

AMERICA'S PART

The United States must bear the brunt of the blame for the swift termination of the Conference. President Roosevelt practically repudiated his own delegation, cancelling their every move towards joint world effort and swinging sharply back to economic isolationism. But even here, we are faced with a conflict of feeling. President Roosevelt, as we have said before, was both magnificently right and deplorably wrong. Knowing the direction of his programme, he should not have damaged America's reputation by encouraging the opening of the Conference. On the surface, it is pure selfishness to declare that attempts to promote world recovery must wait upon the result of the prosperity drive in the United States, that America cannot help others until she herself is sitting pretty. Yet it would be absurd to expect the one man with a definite plan to throw it overboard at the behest of academic theorists. President Roosevelt has an almost religious belief in his policy. If he can infect the people of the United States with his spirit, it cannot but succeed.

A POOR EFFORT

The one hope the Conference had of success—and it was all too slimy—was that the Rooseveltian lead would be followed. There was never any prospect of achievement along other lines. For that reason, the British Empire manifesto, reading like Mr. Neville Chamberlain from beginning to end, is a shockingly disappointing piece of work. It practically throws the British Empire into the lap of the gold countries, despite the declaration that no commitments have been entered upon. Far better had we refrained from committing ourselves in this fashion. We might at least have waited until the result of the great American experiment was clear for all to see. Instead we talk about working "within the limits of sound finance." Orthodox poppycock!

INHUMAN CRUELTY

The woman sent to prison for three months yesterday for cruelty to a child deserved every moment of the sentence. There were features of the case which were too revolting to permit publication and no punishment could have been too severe. Cases such as this make us wonder sometimes whether fines and imprisonment are really a deterrent; whether the inhuman infliction of pain upon a child should not be countered by the infliction of pain upon those responsible. If the birching of women were legally permissible and ever warlike the woman before Mr. Schofield yesterday surely merited it.

EX-GERMAN COLONIES

German interest in colonial questions, which did not abate when the country lost its colonies after the last war, has greatly increased of late with what is felt in Berlin as the growing possibility that some of these territories may be returned to Germany in the form of mandates. German artists who lived in the German African colonies in pre-war days recently organized an exhibition of their works. In landscape, native life and animal kingdom they found abundant wealth of material for their canvases. The German desire for the restoration of their lost colonies was voiced on this occasion by Dr. Schneck, former Governor of German East Africa, who expressed the hope that German youth would again be able to satisfy its longing for adventure. An appeal of this kind is much more likely to meet with sympathetic response than the later outburst by the Lord Mayor of Berlin.

SIR WALTER LAYTON

THE WORLD'S AFFAIRS
—WHAT NEXT?

The suspension of the World Economic Conference is a frank, if regrettable, recognition of the deadlock in which the nations find themselves.

Ever since President Roosevelt's definite refusal to consider any common plan for controlling the fluctuations of the exchanges, and the no less forthright insistence of the "gold" countries that progress in economic matters is impossible unless there is at least an approach towards exchange stability, it has been obvious that the Conference cannot at the present time achieve any of its major objects. The programme of international co-operation has thus been checked.

THE END OF CO-OPERATION?

There will be many people in all countries who will be quick to draw the conclusion that the ideal of a peaceful, co-operative, interdependent world must be abandoned, and that each nation must henceforth seek its salvation by concentrating on its own resources and ignoring the outside world.

But to take this attitude is to despair of civilisation. The demand of the peoples for a steadily rising standard of living will, in the long run, drive the nations back to co-operation; sooner or later we shall succeed where the present Conference has failed.

Moreover, the dangers of an isolationist policy and the difficulties that it arouses are so great that unless I am much mistaken the effort to reach an understanding will be renewed in the not distant future.

Why, then, has the present attempt not succeeded? The causes of the final disagreement are well known, but they lie on the surface. The fundamental difficulty arises from the fact that the countries of the world have not reached the same stage of development at the same time.

Such divergences also exist in the case of political institutions, but the differences are perhaps even more striking in the economic sphere, and the resulting inability of one nation to appreciate another's point of view is correspondingly greater.

Misunderstandings and fundamental differences in approach create such a gulf that even a Conference which started with so much goodwill and with so many sincere declarations of the vital necessity of success has taken less than a month to discover that it can make no progress.

DIVERGENT INTERESTS.

The "gold" nations are old countries, with established industries which they feel they must protect from disaster. They are, in the main, countries where the small peasant proprietor and the salaried middle-class are dominant, and where the savings of these classes are not generally invested in industry and dependent on its profits, but are lent to the State and are dependent on the value of the currency. All of them have struggled back to stability after a long period of economic adversity.

The United States, on the other hand, is a country where industrial evolution has been extremely rapid and where an unexampled boom has been followed by a depression, the scale of which is without precedent anywhere in the world.

No wonder that with all these differences of circumstance it has been impossible in a few weeks to formulate a common policy.

The immediate cause of the deadlock has been the failure to agree on the part that monetary policy should play in curing the depression. The fall of prices has been greatest in the United States, and its effects have also been at their worst there largely because of the great volume of indebtedness, especially in the form of mortgages on farms and houses. On the other hand, America is not greatly dependent upon foreign trade.

MONETARY POLICY.

Americans, therefore, are strongly impressed with the need for a rise in prices as the first step towards recovery, and they are, relatively speaking, sceptical of the benefits to be obtained from freer trade and diminishing the fluctuations between different currencies.

The gold countries, however, have vivid memories of their inflationary period ten years ago. A rise of prices such as they experienced then would again wipe out the savings of their people. They point out that a deliberately engineered rise of prices has always in the past led to a disaster.

They have no objection to a rising price level which is the consequence of returning prosperity and expanding demand, but a rise which happens merely because the public has lost its confidence in the currency is not only harmful in itself, but by leading to speculation, defeats its own ends.

The net effect of these differences is that American public opinion regards inflation as something ardently to be desired, whereas French public opinion—and this view is held universally by those who have suffered inflation in the past—regards it as something to be avoided like the plague.

The Conference has been unable to effect a compromise between these opposing attitudes because at the moment the strength of pre-conceived ideas on each side is too great. In such circumstances a Conference of statesmen can do little. The sudden change of American policy has upset the assumption on which the hope of progress at the Conference was based. Having been told two months ago by the American President that to stabilise currencies was one of the chief aims of the Conference, other countries find themselves bewildered when told now that it is of minor importance.

New and in some ways almost revolutionary ideas have been thrown into the arena by a leader of great courage who is not afraid to experiment. Even within a country public opinion is slow to respond to innovation of this sort. It is out of the question that foreign countries should react to such a lead.

But these new developments have by no means diminished the necessity for international consultation.

A NEW SITUATION.

We have now to reckon, not with an America on the gold standard, (Continued on Page 5.)

CRITICISM OF
MANCHUKUOC.E.R. SALE
NEGOTIATIONS

Arguments raised by the Manchukuo delegation to the conference now proceeding in Tokyo for the sale of the Chinese Eastern Railway are the subject of strong criticism by Izvestia, in an editorial.

The Soviet organ declares there would be no point in wasting further time on a discussion of the U.S.S.R.'s right of ownership in the C.E.R., which, it is contended, is absolutely and indisputably founded both historically and documentarily. Further discussion around this question would only hamper the progress of the business negotiations in Tokyo.

Dwelling on the arguments raised by the Manchukuo delegation against the facts and figures set forth in the memorandum of the Soviet delegation, Izvestia asserts that while these facts and figures as cited are precise, being based on documentary data, including the official reports and balance sheets of the C.E.R., the Manchukuo delegation has advanced no proofs in support of its counter figures. However, the Soviet delegation has every right to call for such documentary proofs.

PRICE REDUCTION.

The difference between Soviet and Manchukuo figures, the Soviet organ goes on to point out, refers to the cost of certain apparatus and C.E.R. properties. The Manchukuo delegation, striving to reduce the price for redemption of the C.E.R., takes the course of asserting that certain properties costing millions of roubles, which at various times were usurped by the old Mukden authorities, are not to be included in the list of properties to be redeemed.

Despite the absolutely clear and indisputable correctness of the inclusion of these properties in the general list of properties for sale, Izvestia says, "the Manchukuo delegation is attempting to justify the usurpatory actions of the former Chinese authorities in Mukden, taking the position that the government of Manchukuo is the legal successor to these properties which were stolen from the C.E.R."

The Soviet organ goes on to refute the attempt of the Manchukuo delegation to justify the actions referred to by making reference to Soviet nationalization of the Egershed section of the port of Vladivostok, pointing out that Egershed was U.S.S.R. property only temporarily given over to use by the C.E.R. and turned back to its rightful owner on a legal basis even prior to the signing of the Peking and Mukden agreements.

SELF-DECEPTION.

The arguments advanced by the Manchukuo delegation in favour of "assessing the value of the C.E.R. at a low figure because of the decline in the railway's economic importance, are firmly denounced by Izvestia. "These people 'prove' that the railway now possesses only an insignificant profitability—this at a time when the lion's share of the railway's revenue is being eaten up by expenditures that have no relation to the normal exploitation and commercial operations of a railway."

"This is an argument," the paper concludes, "is pure self-deception. It is clear to everyone that when Manchukuo acquires the C.E.R. the burden of all expenditures foreign to its normal operation will be removed, thus restoring the railway's vast economic value."

"Such is the reply of the Soviet delegation, given in irrefutable language—the language of facts and documents."

"MYSTERY LAND"
OF THE ARCTICSOVIET AEROPLANE TO SEARCH

An attempt to reach "Mystery Land," an Arctic island which, as yet unknown to man, is revealed by its influence on ocean currents, is to be made by Pilot B. Buchgoltz, during his flight this summer along the entire northern coast of Asia.

The search for the island will be but one element in the romance of this adventurous flight—a flight by hydroplane across a continent, from Crimea in the southwestern corner of the Soviet Union, to Uelen, the Soviet settlement in northeastern Siberia which lies closest to the American continent.

Pilot Buchgoltz will be accompanied by the well-known polar explorer Krasinski, by second pilot Kosukhin, observer Levenchenko, and Tomm, special correspondent of the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda.

Leaving Sebastopol, Buchgoltz will follow the valley of the Volga River, cross the Urals and the Siberian taiga to the Chukotak Peninsula, farthest corner of the Soviet Union. The plane will cover approximately 30,000 kilometers. The route is a difficult one. Buchgoltz will follow water courses wherever possible.

WILD GEESSE.

Reaching Uelen, he will fly to Wrangel Island. With Rogers Bay serving as a temporary base, the plane will be headed to the north in search of "Mystery Land."

The island was first mentioned in the eighteenth century, when an old Cossack, Andriev, noted in his memoirs that he had seen wild geese flying to the north in the spring of each year to an unknown island lying somewhere to the north of the mouth of the Kolumna River. No one, he added, had ever seen geese make their nests on floating ice.

Andriev's memories and his theory might have been forgotten had not all polar explorers who reached that region, from Nansen to Amundsen, reported an odd movement of the ice-floe.

They noted that a ship caught in the ice makes a wide circuit and is suddenly carried to the south, again instead of continuing towards the north. The opinion is widely held by northern explorers that Andriev was correct, that the curious currents are caused by the presence of an island. Buchgoltz is determined to find out.

SAFE SEA ROUTE.

Another task for Buchgoltz and his comrades to accomplish is to seek better and safer paths to the Bering Straits for ships which leave the mouth of the Kolumna River. Last year, seven transport vessels of a Kolumna River trading expedition were blocked in the heavy ice-packs in the Chauski Guba and forced to lie over in the ice-locked sea throughout the entire winter. Summer has brought the release of the vessels from the grip of the Arctic, but the task of finding a safe route through this region remains an urgent one.

When these tasks are accomplished, Buchgoltz will fly his machine back to Sebastopol. Buchgoltz is a well-known naval pilot-instructor, and for several years has been testing new models of naval planes.

MALARIA IN NEW
GUINEADENIAL OF FALSE
REPORTSPREVENTATIVE MEASURES

Sydney, N.S.W.

At the request of the Minister for Territories (Mr. Marr) Mr. F. H. Taylor, entomologist of the school of Tropical Medicine in Sydney, recently investigated the malaria position in New Guinea. Mr. Marr described Mr. Taylor's report as a testimony to the efficacy of the measures taken by the Administration in combating malaria.

"We hear a lot about the prevalence of malaria and malarial mosquitoes in Rabaul," said Mr. Marr, "but Mr. Taylor's report should dispel any impressions that may exist in the public mind owing to ill-founded statements which from time to time are given promiscuously. I wish to emphasize that New Guinea is definitely a white man's country."

"My Taylor reports that, although the climate is particularly suitable for the breeding of mosquitoes, the township of Rabaul is maintained practically free of the pest. He stresses that there are fewer mosquitoes in Rabaul than in any Australian town from Thursday Island to Adelaide. During my own recent stay in Rabaul I did not see even one mosquito."

PATROLLING.

"A system of patrolling in search of breeding grounds is followed, conjointly with organized drives about once a month, when every building and residence is visited and all water tanks, gutters, and water containers are inspected. Any trace of neglect on the part of the occupier of the premises is promptly dealt with, and the penalty for failing to comply with the regulations in this respect is £20. In another section of the report Mr. Taylor states, regarding the use of larvicide: 'Excellent results have been achieved and I can speak with firsthand knowledge of what may be termed almost startling success.'"

SPANISH DANCES
ENTERTAIN.GRANADOS DELIGHTS BIG
AUDIENCE AT PENINSULA

The large gathering at the Rose Room of the Peninsula Hotel last evening was provided with the tit-bit of the year as far as such entertainment is concerned. It was the debut in Hongkong of the celebrated Spanish dancer and guitarist, Asuncion Granados, and her grace and charm in the presentation of some of the picturesque dances for which Spain is world-renowned drew well merited applause.

Through her recital of the works of Spain's most famous composers, including Albeniz, Fomely de Anta, Gravinia, Bodalo, Breton, Romero, Vivas, Guerrero, Valverde and Terrega, she created a charming atmosphere which was further enhanced by her appearance in national costume. Both as a dancer and guitarist Asuncion Granados has won renown in some of the greatest entertainment centres of Europe and the East, and her performance last night showed that she fully justified the reputation she has gained.

No small credit is also due to her accompanist, Jose Ma Gil Serrano, whose perfect renderings of some very difficult compositions revealed a master of piano technique.

Ambrosia

—the purest, most nourishing milk

BABY'S health may be impaired by constant change of diet. Using milks of unknown origin amounts to that. They differ in constitution according to their source and thus tend to cause digestive disturbance.

You can be sure of giving baby the best and freshest Devonshire milk by giving him "Ambrosia"—milk from healthy Devonshire herds—milk purified and dried in Devonshire dairies as soon as it comes from the meadow.

"Ambrosia" contains all the important vitamins, it is many times purer and more easily digested than Grade "A" milk—yet costs less. Hospitals, Clinics and Doctors prescribe "Ambrosia." It is the safest and most delicious milk for Baby, Mother and every nursing purpose.

STUDENTS IN THE PILLORY

"BRAINGLESS REVELS" ATTACKED

THE "ISIS" AGAIN

London.

The Oxford undergraduates' magazine ISIS springs into prominence at more or less regular intervals with some outspoken article criticising "one aspect or another of life at the University."

It has just done so again—this time in a protest by the editor against the "braingless revels" of Oxford undergraduates and their souvenir hunting habits, which have been very marked this term, and culminated in the removal of the sign over the office of the "ISIS."

After enumerating some of the articles which take the undergraduates' fancy—shop signs, street lamps and cutlery in hotels and restaurants, the leading article states that hotel keepers are trusting undergraduates less and less, and adds "that soon students, whether studious or kleptomaniacal, will not be allowed in the streets except under armed guard."

THIEVING MENTALITY.

"It is difficult to imagine the reason for the existence of this thieving mentality," writes the editor, Mr. Robertson Crichton. "It is largely bravado brought on by beer and an inferiority complex. It shows not the fearlessness of the modern undergraduate but rather his present fear of being entirely insignificant."

It is an essential part of the make up of the 'really good man' to be able to look danger in the face without flinching. Thus he feels himself impelled to steal knives and to cause endless fun by decorating the Martyrs' Memorial with articles of varying nature."

TWO LINES OF ACTION.

In seeking the causes of the trouble, the writer says "It can only be either an extremely infantile or drink-sodden mind which derives foolish satisfaction from stealing street lamps."

"There are, therefore, two lines of action which lie before us—to raise the standard of responsiveness (the University 'entrance exam'), or to place an embargo upon liquor entering Oxford. We suggest this latter as the right course."

"Let these pilferers be driven from our gates like the vagabonds and thieves that they are. Then shall we live in a decent state of society."

"No longer shall we have these braingless revels which cause havoc among the tradespeople and which only succeed in lowering the esteem which Oxford men have held for generations."—Reuter.

ABSORBING U.S. WORKLESS

4,000,000 TO GET BACK TO WORK

BY OCTOBER 1

Washington, D.C.

Figures claimed - to show that 4,000,000 idle men can be put back to work by October 1 are announced by Mr. Johnson, Director of the Public Works-Industrial Control Programme.

Almost simultaneously, Miss Perkins, Secretary of Labour, announces an increase of 4.8 per cent. in manufacturing employment and 11.5 per cent. in pay rolls during the month of May.

Miss Perkins pointed out that the gains were far beyond the customary seasonal increases, but said they should not be interpreted as meaning that the course out of the industrial crisis of the last few years was clear.

"A portion of the advance in May should, as was the case in April, be regarded as recovery from the precipitate decline in employment pay rolls following the bank holiday in early March."

"Purchasing power is still considerably below that needed to take care of cumulative increase in production and therefore points to the essence of the problem which has characterized the whole course of the depression."

1,000 PROJECTS.

Figures gathered by his staff, Mr. Johnson said, indicated that 8,000,000 men could be put to work in industrial establishments by October 1, with an additional 1,000,000 employed on the public works programme.

Mr. Johnson described the business recovery measure as an adventure, but asserted that with co-operation on the part of owners of industrial plant the goal could be realized.

Mr. Johnson, with the aid of a corps of economists, labour students and industrialists, is devoting himself particularly to bringing industry together soon in the trade agreements from which higher wages and shorter hours for millions of men are expected to emerge.

The Administration is understood to be hoping to start work on 1,000 or more projects by the latter part of July.—Reuter.

Germ of decay lurk in ugly film

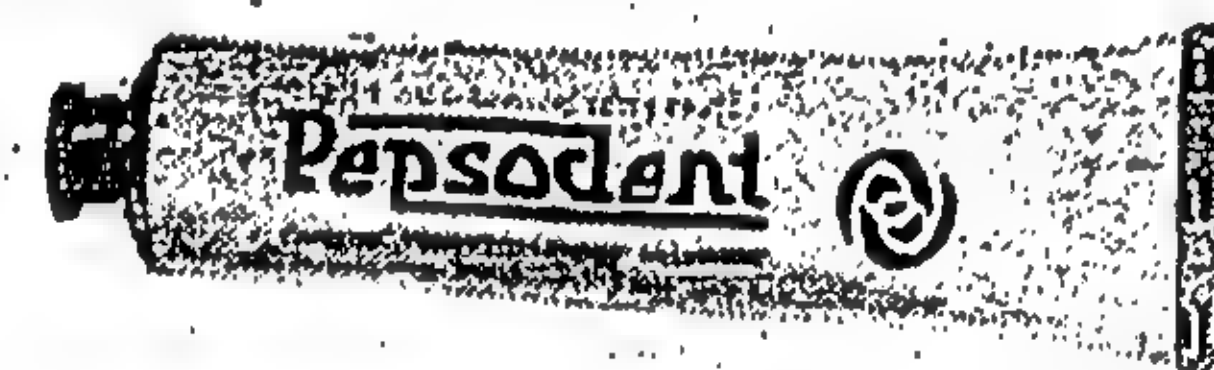

Prevent trouble—keep teeth free from film with this special film-removing tooth paste

If you were to allow your teeth to go even one day without brushing them, a coating of film would form and hide their natural brilliance. Your teeth would become dull and unattractive. You could easily see this ugly coating by looking into the mirror or feel it by rubbing your tongue over your teeth.

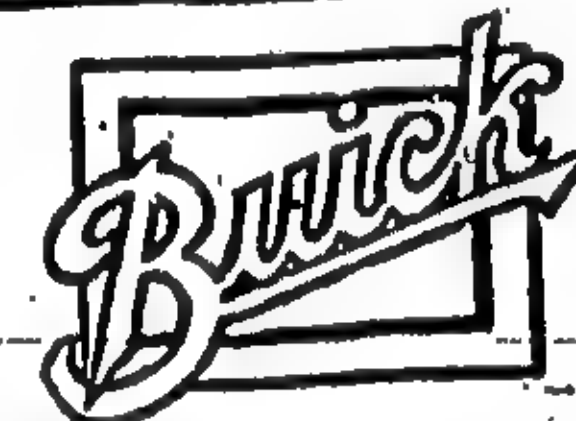

The new cleansing and polishing material in Pepsodent Tooth Paste gently removes this film and reveals the clean enamel surfaces of your teeth. Besides removing this dull coating, Pepsodent polishes teeth to a sparkling brilliance. It does these two things with perfect safety because its cleansing and polishing material is soft—yes, twice as soft—as that ordinarily used in tooth pastes. Start using Pepsodent Tooth Paste today.

Some are features which have been giving the utmost satisfaction to Buick owners, and which Buick engineers have succeeded in improving still further.

New headlights and fender lights harmonize with the general appearance. Viewed from any angle, the 1933 Buick reveals its smartness; but the front view particularly displays its distinction and individuality. Its low, wind-stream styling. EXCITING FINISH TO GAME WITH HANTS

WOOLLEY, HOBBS AND MEAD SCORE CENTURIES

BUT BOWLERS GENERALLY PREDOMINATE

London, July 28.

Surrey, Lancashire, Sussex and Kent all scored victories in the county cricket championship to-day, the cricket being featured by the predominance of ball over bat.

RESULTS AT GLANCE

COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

Surrey (326 and 134-4) beat Somerset (133 and 324) by six wickets.
Lancashire (343 and 146-5 dec.) beat Hampshire (272 and 201) by seven runs.
Sussex (202 and 309) beat Derbyshire (190 and 152) by 169 runs.
Kent (302 and 301-9 dec.) beat Leicester (255 and 175) by 176 runs.

FRIENDLY.

West Indies (440) beat Northumberland (129 and 118) by an innings and 183 runs.

There was a thrilling finish to Lancashire's game with Hampshire.

The Northerners with their eye on the clock made a bold declaration in the second innings closing it at 146 for 5. This left Hampshire to score 218 to win, and the men from the South West almost accomplished the task, finally losing by seven runs only.

Hampshire went all out to get the runs in the time, but they found the bowling of Sibbles just that much too accurate to permit of liberties being taken with it. Sibbles enjoyed a useful analysis, taking 6 wickets for 56 runs.

Earlier, Philip Mead, the veteran batsman, had added another three-figure innings to his long list.

Tyldesley was prominent in Lancashire's first visit to the crease, hitting up 155.

JACK'S THE BOY!

Jack Hobbs again! Another century to the wonderful batsman considerably aided Surrey in their victory against Somerset.

Gover first dismissed Somerset for 133, capturing 5 for 52, and with Hobbs rattling up 117, Surrey were able to obtain a big lead, totalling 326.

Somerset got on top of the Londoners' attack in their second venture and compiled 324.

Surrey attacked their task of scoring 184 runs with the utmost confidence and they were obtained for the loss of four wickets.

Frank Woolley has started to come into his own again. Another century in the second innings against Leicester did much to enable Kent to win by a handsome margin.

FEARED FREEMAN.

But Freeman was really the hero. Bowling with fine skill, he had the Leicester men puzzled in both of their visits to the wicket. His first figures were 6 for 87, but he improved on these in the second, taking 7 for 41.

Bowlers predominated in the Sussex v. Derbyshire match, four enjoying successes. Sussex won quite easily, after being sent back for 202 in the first knock. They improved on the return and topped the 300-mark. Derby were all at sea and were dismissed for 190 and 152. Cornford (5 for 25) and Bowley (4 for 34) for Sussex, and Copson (6 for 69) and Pope (7 for 84) for Derby were the outstanding bowlers.

Brilliant bowling by a young Minor Counties player featured the game in which the West Indies beat Northumberland by an innings.

In face of a score of 40, Allan captured 6 wickets for 88 runs—a remarkable achievement.

An unusual match was seen in the National Baseball League to-day, when Philadelphia and Boston finished all square at 12 runs each. The game went to ten innings, Philadelphia scoring 20 hits against Boston's 19, whilst the latter were also credited with one error.

Scores as supplied by Reuter were:

defied all the ingenuity of the Frenchman.

Perry levelled up with a series of magnificent winning volleys and captured the set after one of the most spectacular recoveries seen by a crowd at Autoull.

After this it was Cochet's turn to come into the picture and he raised high the hopes of his countrymen when he captured the fourth set by means of some superb play.

COCHET'S FINE FIGHT.

With his back-to-the-wall and in the knowledge that only the finest passing shots he could produce would stop Perry from winning, Cochet proceeded to pull these almost impossible strokes out of the bag.

Perry carried on at the net, but the Frenchman found his angles and beat his young opponent time and again with glorious drives.

Then came the anti-climax. Cochet just crumpled up in the final set. He lost his touch and confidence and Perry literally walked away with the match, winning a set which contained nothing worth naming a rally.

AUSTIN'S SUCCESS.

Andre Merlin, making his debut in the Davis Cup, was given an all too severe test. Not only did the draw pit him against Austin, but it forced him to play the first match of the series.

Those factors, together with Austin's pronounced superiority, left the young Frenchman impotent.

So completely did Austin dominate the play in the first set and the first four games of the second, that he was guilty of ending up. He offered Merlin short lobs, and with a mercurial which could almost be heard by the spectators, Merlin proceeded to win some points.

Austin, leading by one set and 4-love in the second, found himself pulled back sharply to 4-all. He then recaptured his concentration and proceeded to draw away again.

When he played his normal game, Austin was easily on top, and only in the fourth game of the third set did he encounter any further serious opposition.

PROTRACTED RALLY.

At this point there was an unusually protracted struggle. The game went to seven deuces and one rally contained from 35 to 40 strokes. It ended in Merlin netting to give Austin the set and match.

The heat was sweltering and Austin looked ill and very distressed at the finish.

The scores in this match were: Austin won 6-3, 6-4, 6-0.

YORKSHIRE CRICKET

Under to pressure on space, the article on "Yorkshire Cricket in the Old Days" was crowded out of the Telegraph yesterday. The feature will, however, be resumed on

HOW AUSTIN AND PERRY BEAT COCHET & MERLIN

REUTER'S DESCRIPTION OF DAVIS CUP MATCHES

Paris, July 28.

The following descriptions of the opening day's play in the Davis Cup Challenge round tie between France (holders) and Britain, have been sent by Reuter.

AUSTIN v. MERLIN.

H. W. Austin won the first match of the series at the Stade Roland Garros to-day when he defeated Andre Merlin 6-3, 6-4, 6-0.

It was sweltering hot when the players took the court before 19,000 enthusiastic spectators.

The Davis Cup was enthroned opposite the Presidential box, in which was seated the President, M. Lebrun, and his party.

Austin's experience and court-craft, together with deep driving and shrewd placements forced Merlin frequently to the net.

Austin went ahead at 4-1 and 6-3, finally finishing off the set at this score.

AUSTIN TIRES.

Master of the situation, Austin quickly seized a 4-love lead in the second set, but Merlin became stronger as Austin showed signs of tiring.

Austin played into his opponent's hands by putting up comfortable lobs. Merlin, making full use of the position pulled up to 4-all, but thereafter it was easy for Austin.

Only in the fourth game of the third set did Merlin show any more fight. The game was sent to deuce seven times, including a long rally of 35 to 40 strokes. It ended in Merlin netting to give the Englishman the set.

Austin walked off the court looking ill and very distressed.

COCHET v. PERRY.

Fred Perry beat Henri Cochet in the second match 8-10, 6-4, 8-6, 3-6, 6-1.

Perry twice double-faulted in the second and fourth games of the first set and Cochet led 3-1.

Perry went up to the net on this right ball and levelled at 4-all. Perry again evened up at the twelfth game, and thereafter games went with service up to the 18th. Here, Perry, leading 30-love had a disastrous period of errors.

Perry would have won the set if he had shown more concentration, for he was sending over gems of returns.

Perry led 2-love in the second set, but Cochet recovered to break through and lead 4-2 on Perry's errors. The Englishman's rapier-like volleys pierced Cochet's armour at all points.

Cochet got through to 5-3 in the third set and had set point. Then Perry stormed the net and outplayed the Frenchman.

Cochet took the fourth set mainly on his astonishing, passing shots, achieving impossible looking angles. Perry at one time led 3-1, but Cochet made himself master of the play in this set.

The Frenchman simply crumpled up in the final set, in which there was nothing worth naming a rally.—Reuter.

CORAL ISLANDS

CHINA'S CLAIM TO THE PARACELS GROUP

Nanking, July 28.

The Foreign Office has received telegrams from many public organizations requesting that a strong protest be lodged with the French Government regarding the occupation of the islands in the South China Sea.—Reuter.

History of Claim.

Canton, July 28.
Interviewed concerning the occupation by the French of certain coral islands in the China Sea, a prominent official of the Kwangtung Provincial Government said it was not certain from the meagre announcement whether the islands in dispute embraced those under China's sovereignty.

The official pointed out that the islands belonging to China are known as Paracels Islands, comprising Amphitrite Groups, Tree Island, North Island, Middle Island, Smith Island, Woody Island, Rocky Island, Lincoln Island, Bremen Breaker, Bombo Reef, Prattle Island, Money Island, Drummond Island, Duncan Island, Palm Island, Observation Island, Triton Island, Passu Keah, Discovery Reef, and North Reef.

The position of the Paracels Islands is given as 15°46'—17°5' degrees north latitude, and 110°14'—112°45' east longitude.

The history of the islands shows that they have been in China's possession for several hundred years. In 1883 the German Government sent a survey party to map out the islands, but a strong protest from the Chinese Government was made, with the result that no further action was taken by the German Government.

In Kansu 33, five years before the Chinese Republic, a military officer was sent by the Chinese Imperial Government to open up and develop the islands. This was followed by the Republican Government giving a concession to a merchant company to develop the resources of the islands.

A few years ago, the Chung University under the auspices of the Reconstruction Department, dispatched a party of students to survey and report on the islands and their resources.

About a year ago, the Canton Government granted to a local fertilizing company the rights to work the guano deposits on the islands. It is part of the reconstruction plan of the Canton Government to install a radio station on one of the islands.

In view of the above facts, the official said that if the French occupation took in these islands, then the South West Council would undoubtedly lodge a vigorous protest to the French Government.—Canton News Agency.

Canton Concerned.

Canton, July 28.

High officials of the Southwest, learning of the French occupation of the "Second Sal Sha Islands," regard the act as nothing short of invasion.

Officials are studying the situation closely. They are particularly concerned for the welfare of Chinese fishermen of the islands, who possess a thriving industry, and whom, it is feared, the French may eject.—Central Press.

Previous Disputes.

While the islands claimed by the French are said to be those located in Lat. 10, Long. 115 the Si Sha group of islands, referred to in Nanking telegrams, are those situated at 15°46'—17°5' Lat. and 110°14'—112°45' Long., otherwise known as Paracels Islands, separated from Hainan Islands by a distance of about 300 miles.

The Paracels Islands were previously claimed by both the Japanese and French. The Japanese made an unsuccessful claim about ten years ago, according to Chinese reports, which was preceded by the establishment of a Japanese fishing corporation there. Strong Chinese protest subsequently stopped the Japanese fishing enterprise.

Last year the French Government, through the Indo-China authorities, made a claim on these islands, but after the exchange of some correspondence between them and the Chinese Government, who protested, the issue was dropped.

The dispute over the coral islands in the South China Sea and the possible development of its involving the Paracels Islands recalls the suggestion in Canton last year made by the Chinese diplomat, Mr. C. C. Wu, former Minister to Washington, who strongly advocated the formation of a naval base and industrial outpost in Hainan. The advocates of this scheme must have in mind the danger of the South China Sea Islands being utilized by foreign powers for air and naval bases. Such a development and these islands' easy communication with North Borneo, and Singapore, (British), Philippine Islands (U.S.A.), and Annam (French) make Hainan Island quite important.

CAFE SALE SEQUEL.

PAST AND PRESENT OWNERS GO TO COURT

The oft-adjourned action between David Gabriller, formerly of David's Cafeteria, Hankow Road, and the present owner, Charles North, was concluded before the Judge, Mr. R. E. Lindsay, yesterday, the main judgment being given for the former.

Gabriller sued to recover $500, the remainder of the purchase price of the cafe, and defendant consented to judgment.

North brought a counter-claim for $507.50 made up as follows:—$300 flat rate for meals supplied to Mr. and Mrs. Gabriller from March 28 to May 28; $5 taken by Mr. Gabriller ostensibly for legal expenses on April 5; $24.20 chits at the cafe signed by Mr. Gabriller or his family; $187.35 for radio sets which should have been included in the stock-in-trade of the cafe.

Mr. D. L. Stricklett of Messrs. G. K. Hall Brutton and Co., appeared for Mr. Gabriller, and Mr. O. E. C. Marton, of Messrs. Deacons, represented Mr. North.

Evidence having been given by North at the previous hearings, Mr. Stricklett said he would put his client in the box to prove that the provision of meals for the family was a business arrangement. That the children were to receive free meals had been a condition of the sale of the cafe, and when North asked Gabriller to stay on until the transfer of the license had been effected, he offered also to supply him and his wife with meals during their stay. That was only the natural thing to do.

Mr. Gabriller in the witness box bore out his solicitor's statement.

Giving judgment, his Lordship said that in the main he believed Gabriller's story, but ruled that the provision of meals for him and his wife was only intended to run for three weeks, during which time both parties thought that the license would be transferred. As a matter of fact the transfer took two months. Judgment would be given for North for $173, which represented the cost of meals during five weeks, and judgment would be given against him on the other counts.

MAY RESIGN POST

New York, July 28.

The Harold Tribune Washington correspondent writes that there is talk there of Mr. Correll Hull resigning his post as Secretary of State owing to his treatment at the President's hands while he was attending the Economic Conference, and the intervention of Professor Moley, one of Mr. Roosevelt's advisers.

The newspaper says that it is hinted in inner circles of the administration that Mr. Hull's position has become "incongruous." Meanwhile President Roosevelt has called Mr. Hull an invitation to stay at his New York home. This is regarded as the first step towards appeasement of the Secretary of State's feelings. —Rev.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

When playing a hand defensively you must try, by making the proper discards, to convey a picture of your hand to your partner.

It generally does not pay to false-card when on the defence. Of course the declarer may false-card to his heart's content, as he has no partner to deceive. However, there are times, if you are on your toes, when you can make a beautiful false-card that may be the means of helping you defeat the declarer's contract.

Here is a play that came up at a tournament in Chicago some time ago. It was executed by Henry P. Jaeger of Cleveland, past president of the American Bridge League and one of the country's most popular players. Just to show that he had not forgotten the play, Mr. Jaeger duplicated it in the following hand at a recent tournament.

The Bidding

Mr. Jaeger was sitting in the East. South was the dealer and opened the bidding with one heart. North, fearing that a bid of one no trump might be too discouraging to partner, overcalled with two clubs.

South then showed his second suit by bidding two diamonds. North bid two no trump. South, however, with his singleton spade did not like the hand for no trump.

and bid three hearts, and when North learned that his partner had a good five-card heart suit, he carried the contract to four.

The Play

West had a rather discouraging hand from which to open. It was not much use to lead the fourth best spade as he could not hope to establish a trick in that suit.

He finally selected the doubleton club opening and played the ace of clubs. Mr. Jaeger won with the ace and immediately returned a small club, which the declarer held with the ten.

Declarer now made his proper play—the ace of hearts. Mr. Jaeger was quick to recognize an opportunity for his old false-card play and quickly followed with the queen of hearts.

He knew by the bidding that the declarer must hold five hearts to the ace king, so he realized that if he played the ten, the declarer would try to drop the queen by leading the king. His only chance to defeat the contract was to have the declarer place the ten spot in the West hand.

Declarer immediately read that West held the ten, eight and seven of hearts, so he led the deuce of hearts. When West played the seven, declarer finessed dummy's nine.

Mr. Jaeger won with the ten, returned the nine of clubs, South

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

"Song of the Eagle," a bold, sweeping drama of two decades of American history, as seen through the eyes of one American family, will open to-morrow at the Queen's Theatre.

The breath-taking march of events during the most vital period in world history, from the opening of the World War up to the present, is thrillingly chronicled in the picture. It is acted out by a cast headed by Charles Rickford, Richard Arlen, Mary Brian, Jean Hersholt, Louise Dresser, Andy Devine and George E. Stone. They worked under direction of Ralph Murphy. The picture, produced by Charles R. Rogers is released by Paramount.

The film centres around a respectable middle-class brewing family. When war breaks out, they send two sons into the conflict. Only one returns. He and his father find their business ruined by the enactment of Prohibition, but they struggle through the years that follow, maintaining their dignity and self-respect in spite of sorrow and loss of fortune.

They welcome the return of beer as a return to the happiness they once had, only to find themselves confronted by a problem that all America may face in the next few months. The picture daringly forecasts the future, venturing a prediction as to what may be expected when gangsters and racketeers find their strongly built businesses menaced by the law.

"Love on Wheels"

Whether Gordon Barker sang in "Love on Wheels," was a vexed topic a little time ago. The advance publicity claimed that the film song was the "first attempt to sing at any time in his active career"; a statement played the jack and West trumped the trick with the eight of hearts.

West returned a spade, a small spade was played from dummy. East won the trick with the queen and returned a diamond. Declarer went up with the ace, and then played a small heart which he won with dummy's jack. A diamond was then discarded on the king of clubs but the declarer still had a diamond to lose, and his contract was defeated two tricks.

With the club opening, and without the false-card, the declarer would have made five odd.

was at once fastened upon by someone who became quite indignant. This man could remember well hearing Gordon Barker singing a number of songs in an American musical show called "Songs of Guns." And he sang, it appeared, at Liverpool, and to end the little dispute, Mr. Barker agreed that that was so. "Love on Wheels," he says, is the first film in which he has attempted to sing.

"Love on Wheels" is commencing to-morrow at the King's Theatre.

"The Age of Consent"

Hollywood sends to the General Theatre a story of deep pathos and two young lovers facing life and its eternal problems, alone and a bit afraid, in "The Age of Consent" which must, if you still like to see two clean youngsters holding hands, remind you of your own young loves and dreams.

The players' acting is natural, fresh and untainted by affectation. Particularly in this true of Dorothy Wilson—and all the more remarkable—since she was lifted Cinderella-like out of a typist's position at the studio into the lead of the picture.

Miss Wilson, judging by her superb work, is in the type of girl any parent gladly would claim as daughter. Her wholesomeness is genuine, her moral outlook purged of sophistication.

You also see Richard Cromwell, with only a few pictures behind him, give a superlative performance of young manhood at the crossroads of life.

"The Age of Consent" which Gregory La Cava directed with a deep understanding of maturing boys and girls, is the story of two youngsters attending college who cannot decide whether to marry or pursue their scholastic careers.

"Wild Girl"

"Wild Girl," with Charles Farrell, Joan Bennett and Ralph Bellamy in the stellar roles, comes to the King's Theatre very shortly. It is a Fox dramatization of Bret Hart's famous story, "Salome Jane's Kiss." Other notable in the cast are Minna Gombell, Eugene Pallette, Irving Pichel, Sarah Padden and Louise Beavers. Raoul Walsh directed it.

"Strictly Personal"

"Strictly Personal," drama ripping open the machinery of the "get-acquainted club," which prey upon the shy and lonely throughout the country, shows its showing at the Queen's Theatre to-day.

Marjorie Rambeau, Eddie Quillian and Dorothy Jordan play the leading roles in the film.

Action of the film takes place in a "get-acquainted club" of the better sort—a place where shy Romeo and Juliet may meet, mingle, and possibly marry.

SHOOTING OFF GREEN ISLAND

TWO MEN ESCAPE FROM CHINESE SHIP

SHANGHAIED FOR ARMY

Another incident of Chinese being tricked into recruiting for the Army is brought to light in the Police reports issued this morning.

While the Asiatic Petroleum Oil barge Sumatra was about one and a-half miles west of Green Island, a Chinese merchant ship, flying the Chinese flag crossed her bow. Two men were observed to jump overboard and while swimming away to freedom were fired on by revolvers and rifles. They escaped unscathed.

The Chinese steamer veered quite close to the island, and then turned starboard and proceeded out to sea.

The Sumatra lowered a boat and rescued the men. When brought aboard they were taken to Bay View Police Station where they told their story. Both stated they were tricked at Canton to board a ship bound for Fukien, and when the vessel got under way, they discovered they were recruited for the Army. As the ship was journeying to the west of Hongkong they leaped overboard and were picked up by the Sumatra.

That is the record of a 21-year-old girl whose skill with the razor has earned her fame among the local inhabitants and the visitors to the Midland village in which she lives.

As soon as she left school, she went into business with her father and she has been shaving and haircutting in the "gent's" saloon ever since. Now she is known as "The Black Country Razor Queen."

She is very interested in her trade and cannot understand why more girls do not take it up
"because," as she says, "a girl has a nice light touch for shaving and it is not heavy work."—Reuter.

THE HIRTENBERG SENSATION

INCIDENT NOW CLOSED

London, July 28.

Captain Anthony Eden, the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, answering a Commons question to-day, said that all the Hirtenberg war material which the Austrian Government undertook to send back to Italy had been returned and he was happy to state that the incident was now closed.—British Wireless.

COTTON TRADE WAR

GOVERNMENT NOT INTERVENING

AMICABLE PACT HOPED FOR

London, July 28.

The idea must not be allowed to get abroad that the Lancashire textile industry is decadent, declared Colonel Colville,
Secretary of the Department of Overseas Trade in the House of Commons to-night.

Col. Colville was speaking during the debate on the adjournment of the House when Japanese competition in British Empire countries was under discussion.

He admitted that Japanese competition was a major factor, but the Government does not propose to intervene in the contemplated cotton discussions between the cotton industrialists of Lancashire, Japan and India, although they will give the Lancashire representatives all the assistance they can.

BEST SOLUTION.

The Government thought that the best solution would be to arrive at an amicable arrangement.

Col. Colville explained that the balance of trade between Britain and India was almost even and might serve as a model for negotiations which Britain is negotiating with other countries.—Reuter.
